BY ORDER OF COM.

Several weeks ago the Job Brothers, of Corvallis, were held for the grand jury of Benton county, on the charge of misappropriation of funds in their hands as bankers. The grand jury on investigation failed to find a true bill and they were discharged. As they had a branch bank at Yaquina, their case was brought before the grand jury of the circuit court in session there, and a true bill was found against them, and against Dr. Davis, who had charge of their Yaquina bank. They gave bonds to appear at the next term of court.

The Recent Election.

The regular city election passed off without any disturbance at the polls. Considerable interest was manifested in the result, and many hours of hard work were done. The closest contest was for marshal. Two good men were candidates and the result showed that their friends were nearly equal in number.

There were three tickets in the field. The Citizens' ticket was elected in full, with the exception of marshal. The prohibition ticket had quite a following, but was badly beaten. The recorder and marshal were re-elected, having evidently given general satisfaction. The new treasurer, Mr. Hyde, will take good care of his trust. The mayor, Mr. Montague, was the unanimous choice, and as such will demonstrate the wisdom of his election, by his administration. The council—all new men—are drawn from the conservative element in the city, and will doubtless perform their duties with wisdom and integrity. There is no foundation whatever for the assertion made on election day, that this is a whiskey council. It is a council of good, honest sober men, fully as well able to take care of the city's welfare as though they had the prefix of "prohi" to their names.

Below, we give the vote in full.

The Prineville news tells the following interesting incident: "We saw an intoxicated man meet a little innocent child on the street the other day. He hailed the little one in a fatherly way, drunken as it might have been, asked its name, its age, and its place of residence. Then he gave it a dollar, with kindly given instructions to use the money in the purchase of good books. Then, as he parted with it, he murmured something we could not hear; but it sounded like a blessing, tenderly spoken. And we saw tears flowing from his blood-shot eyes."
