O'Neill Bros. & Callaghan's Straw Supply for their California Mill is Burned.

About 9 o'clock last Friday morning the big straw barn of the South Coast Paper Mills, located near Sequel, Cal., caught fire and by afternoon was, with its contents, totally destroyed. There was 1,000 tons of straw stored in the shed. This is the second incendiary fire that has taken place at the mills. One of the partners of the firm places their loss through stoppage of labor and loss of straw at $10,000.

The Mill Co. has offered a reward of $2,500 for the arrest and conviction of the incendiaries. The citizens of that place will probably add quite a sum to the reward.

A California paper publishes an article, regarding the fire, in its editorial columns, which reads as follows:

"The destruction by fire of a thousand tons of straw for O'Neill Bros. & Callaghan, proprietors of the Sequel Paper Mills, is not only a serious and embarrassing loss to the owners but a calamity to the community. Raw material for paper making cannot be supplied from the open market like lumber or merchandise, and this fire will cause the cessation of work for six months the coming season, involving a loss to the community in the employment of labor, market for wood and other supplies. If these fires are incendiary in their origin the county should offer a liberal reward for the apprehension of the culprit. The Sequel Paper Mill is one of our most beneficent industries, and the proprietors have had to contend with many adversities of late. They are entitled not only to popular sympathy but to active cooperation in ferreting out the criminal guilty of such a diabolical deed."

Mr. Ed. O'Neill, who is now managing the mills at this place, in speaking of the fire, says: "We are well aware where to look for the instigators of the deed and we know who the parties are that pay crooks for doing such work for them."

It is the duty of that county to offer a liberal reward for the apprehension of such fellows, as a liberal reward is always an effective inducement toward bringing the culprit to justice.

A good joke is told on Linn county's popular sheriff. He was at Salem the other day and on returning was stooping down, and looking at the home of the tramp who was waiting for the train to start, stepped up to him and said, "Get right under there; you can make it all right." "Do you take me for a tramp?" said the sheriff, as he hastened to take his seat in the car.—Albany Democrat.
