ISCONSUMPTION CONTAGIOUS?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE EXPRESS Plague has disappeared from Christian countries. Smallpox is almost gone, and cholera is practically conquored. Consumption, however, is still with us, and is to-day the most deadly enemy of mankind. If we take a map of the world and color it according to the prevalence of consumption, it will be colored deepest where the population is densest, and the only clear spots will be the arctic and antaretic circles, deserts and high mountain regions where buman beings are fewest. In Great Britain 70,000 die each year the most useful period of human existence. In the United States in 1880 there died of consumption 91,000, or 18 to every 1,000 persons. Going back thirty years we find the proportion to be the same. In 1890 the deaths must have been 117,000.

Now a great many people do not believe that consumption is contagious. In one sense it is not, in another it is highly so. As long as the sputtum of a consumptive patient is kept moist it is not dangerous, but when the patient free use of the people of Linn expectorates on the floor and it is tramped under foot and gets dry and the dust or particles float in the air of the room, then there is danger of the germs being inhaled by any person who may enter the room, and it makes no difference as to the health of the party thus exposed, as the germs will attack the most robust as well as the weak, as the germs inhaled by anyone will lay dormant for a long time and wait until a favorable time in which to grow and develop. This occurs when the patient is afflicted with a cold, then the lungs become inflamed and it is then that the tubercle baccilus grow and multiply by the thousands. This explains why so many people die after taking a bad cold.

In England and Germany, no per son is allowed to ride on a car with healthy persons who is afflicted with consumption. A special car is provided for their accommodation. If there was a single case of smallpox reported in Lebapon, what great alarm it would cause, but no one seems to be alarmed about the dread destroyer Consumption, and still where smallpox destroys its hundreds, consumption destroys thousands.

Now a word to those who have consumptives in their house. Do not eat of dishes that must be used by them. Do not occupy the same room at night with them. Give them all the pure air you can. Have receptacles for them to spit in; pour water in the same and add bine vitriol, earbolic seid, or some other good disinfectant. Change frequently and never allow the patient to spit on the handkerchief. This is one of the most dangerous habits on the part of the patient. I write this for the benefit of people who do not think this disease is a communicable one, and I may write again on the subject, as I believe it is my duty to my fellow man to do so. The time is near at band that this dread disease will be feared and dreaded worse than smallpox or cholera. In Michigan the facts laid down in this are being enforced, and as a result, people recognize the extreme danger of consumption.

DR. J. A. LAMBERSON. OBITUARY.

Our dear child and beloved daughter, Mrs. Rhoda A. Williams, was born July 3, 1868, and died July 16, 1894, aged 26 years and 13 days. Her place of nativity has been in and near Lebanon, Oregon, at which place she received her very bright education and entered into the active duties incident in the battle of life, with her estimable and devoted husband, Mr. A. G. Williams, to whom she gave the guardianshipsof her only son, little Everett, who is 6 years old the foundation of whose education his dear mother laid. May God water it until she shall meet him in glory, where the brightest evidence on earth' proves that her soul is now resting. Their marriage took place on Nov. 21, 1886. Prior to which time she became identified with the Comberland Presbyterian Sabbath school and church, to which church her parents then belonged; first a pupil, then a teacher, then a member of Young People's Christian Endeavor society. She was also a member of the Ladies' Aid Society. Aggressive, consistent, unwavering, never leaving her first love. never changing her faith, doctrine or creed, a rare jewel; her aspirations, to disseminate useful knowledge and liter-

She loved the dear old doorstep and hearthstone, father and mother, brothers and sisters, at which place she placed her house in order, asked for Jesus' hand, as did sinking Peter, and laid her armor down. Very audibly she told us that He came, and that this morning she would walk with Him. Then today with Jesus she is walking.

Her illness, in brief: In very early school life, according to her own statement, in attending school in bad weather and over bad roads, she contracted cold, which developed into greater constitutional weakness, and finally into pulmonary disease, which has baffled the skill of anything that earth can do.

Thus ended a brief and useful life. Truly our circle again is broken. Yes, again we are bereft. Will God negept this token of our love to her, this tribute to the immortal dead? And may all e of our lives the living head, and may we, like her, triumphant, rise to walk with Jesus beyond the skies! HER FATHER.

At Sacramon

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 17 .- The railroad company is meeting with considerable trouble in getting out trains this morning. Yesterday crews easily obtained, but for some reason presumably through fear, only a few trainmen put in an appearance this morning. A dozen or more switchmen who worked yesterday, quit today. They claim the strikers wated upon them last night and threatened to kill them if they continued in the employ of the railroad company.

Troops are still held in readings to quell another outbreak.
