Editor - and - Proprietor.

As the case against Durrant is being worked for the murder of Misses Lamont and Williams in San Francisco, public sentiment would not be satisfied with a verdict other than guilty, justice cannot be too swift in ridding society of such a desperate enemy. If, on the other hand, he is a victim of circumstances he is very unfortunate and is to be pitied. The force of sympathy is with the preponderance of testimony to stay the tide.

The official figures show that the late legislature employed 190 clerks an average of two for each member and ten besides. Some of these clerks did not work five minutes during the entire session, yet they drew full pay from the time they were sworn in until the last day. Others were not capable of doing work if there had been work for them. This legislative clerkship business is one of the worst steals in the state.

The flattering prospects of the Snake river, Burnt river, Willow creek and Payette sections in a fruit way have resulted in an agitation for a cannery at Huntington. The output of this district, now only in its beginning, is already sufficient to supply a plant of 5000 cans daily for four months in the ear—the fruit season. A Williamette valley man is now on the ground negotiating with the growers for aid and promise of co-operation.

A big hotel at the Soap creek sulphur springs, Benton county, is one of the things that is in prospect. T. C. Baker, the owner, recently bonded the spring and eighty acres of land for $6000 to a New York man. The latter, according to the statement of Mr. Baker, proposes, if he completes the purchase, to erect a big summer hotel, and make the springs famous as a summer resort.

The minimum carload weight of freight on the Southern Pacific has heretofore been 20,000 pounds. It is now increased to 24,000 pounds on nearly all articles, there being but a few exceptions.

The respondent's brief in the Oregon Pacific appeal was completed this morning, and will be filed with interested parties today. It is the combined production of lawyers Bryson and McFadden, and bristles with forceful and brilliant legal points. As they make out the case their position seems impregnable, but the old fact of two sides to every question involves the outcome in a degree of uncertainty. Ten days are now allowed the appellants to file a supplementary brief, and then the case will be ready for argument, the hearing and decision thereafter depending entirely upon the convenience of the supreme court. The respondent's brief contains 122 pages.—Times.

The Corvallis Times man is a good figure. Here is an excellent showing for the hog business: Born, Manly Currier's poland china sow, April 1, 1894, fifteen pigs; November 1, 1894, nineteen pigs and March 5, 1895, fifteen pigs, making a total increase of forty-nine pigs in eleven months and four days. Two of the first litter were slaughtered before nine months of age, dressed 250 pounds each, and the rest were in proportion, making an aggregate from the first litter of 3,750 pounds of pork. With the process kept up this sow's producing is 3,750 pounds of meat, three times per year or an aggregate of 11,250 pounds per annum, worth, at five cents per pound $562.50.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known in the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and gives the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. CHERRY & CO., Toledo, O.

FIRELESS PEOPLE OF TO-DAY.

An Abyssinian Tribe Knows Nothing of Cooking—Primitive Andamanites. If the using of flesh food be instanced as a distinction that separates man from anthropoids, it can be urged on the other side that the latter feed on insects, and when in captivity by no means despise flesh food. The first man, too, was probably a "vegetarian," but necessity and the absence of sufficient vegetable food for his augmenting species may have driven him to a flesh diet.

The cooking or roasting of meat must be regarded as an acquisition of a later epoch, because in the earliest stages of man's development there was undoubtedly a very long fireless period, and because there are said to be fireless people even in the present day, such as the Dukas, in Abyssinia, observes the Fortnightly Review. The Australians, too, knew nothing of boiling and roasting food until the advent of the Europeans. For the rest, all the savages know how to kindle fire by the well-known method of friction of two sticks, or, what is simpler, they take a torch along with them on their wanderings that never goes out. The Andamanites preserve their fire by consuming the interiors of hollow trees.

Since the Andamanites have come in contact with Europeans they have superseded this method of preserving fire by the use of matches, which are very favorite objects with them. They eat their food either raw or roasted, less frequently boiled, as they have no cooking utensils. Moreover, according to the latest accounts from Otto Lueders of these savages, great mortality prevails among them, and they withdraw themselves into the woods more and more at the approach of the Europeans. They go completely or almost completely naked, live in holes in the earth or under overhanging rocks, or build themselves a sort of rough hut with branches and leaves. Their weapons are spears, bows and arrows tipped with iron, which they seize as booty from the wrecks of stranded ships. Their hatchets and axes, formerly made of stone, are now made of iron, and are bound to the handle with thongs. They only count up to three, and have no conception of God or immortality; they believe in a good and bad spirit only, hide their dead in the ground or throw them into the sea or lay them on wooden scaffolds, dance to the tune of a sounding board, have a very keen sense of vision—with their arrows they shoot fish that no European can see—are of a fierce, suspicious disposition, and, according to Lueders, they probably constitute the transition of primitive nations of Indians to Australians, a remnant of an extinct people. They are of nearest kin to the Negriton of the Philippines. Their body height is fifty-six to fifty-nine inches.

A DANGEROUS FOE.

The Terrific Charge of the Ungulate Rhinoceros.

The author of "Discovery of Lakes Rudolf and Stefanie" had shot a zebra, and his men were making ready to cut it up, when two rhinoceroses appeared in the distance. Apparently the firing of the gun had disturbed their nap and made them thoroughly angry. Though more than four hundred paces off, the rhinoceroses swerved aside when they saw us, and then dashed upon us with the speed of race horses. As usual, my black companions took to their heels, making for a solitary tree some distance off. It was hopeless for me to think of reaching it, and there was not so much as a blade of straw for cover anywhere. And behind the dead zebra, which would have been better than nothing, three of my men were already crouching.

There was nothing for it but to brave the situation out; so I knelt on one knee, the better to take aim, and, with my elephant gun in hand, waited to fire till I could hope to kill. It seemed a long time before I could cover the shoulder of either of the huge beasts, and I knew any other shot would be useless. The result was that I did not pull the trigger till one of the animals was only some eight or ten paces off.

It staggered and fell, but the next moment was on its feet again. It was not killed, but its ardor was cooled, for it turned away, followed by its companion. Twice it seemed about to fall, and I did not think a second shot would be necessary; but it got away with undiminished speed, and, though we followed it for some distance, we lost it.

ODD KINDS OF RENT.

Horseshoes, Nails, a Red Horse and Other Payments in Lieu of Cash.

Suit and service for the desirable properties known as "The Forge," in St. Clement Dunes, and "The Moors," in the county of Salop, were duly paid by the city of London to the crown, the rent consisting of six horseshoes, sixty-one nails and two bundles of faggots, one of which had to be cut with an ax and the other with a bill hook, says the London Telegraph. Mr. Crawford, the city solicitor, acted as woodcutter, the queen's remembrancer officiated as referee, and the interesting ceremony took place at the law courts in the presence of a number of ladies and gentlemen. For six hundred years and more the rent has neither been raised nor lowered, but has always consisted of the same number of horseshoes, the same number of nails and the same number of cut faggots.

The queen's remembrancer, Master Pollock, explained to the company that though now the idea of rent was something paid in hard cash, originally it was some service or thing rendered, and in former days when lands were granted by great lords and knights to tenants it was on the promise to furnish horses, men and so on. In process of time these services came to be exceedingly irksome and troublesome, and were commuted into a money payment. An ancestor of Sir Walter Scott held certain lands by payment of one red rose, per annum. The rent paid by the city in the reign of King Henry III. for the properties mentioned had never been commuted.

OBITUARY.

Judson Sharp, son of Michael and Polly Sharp, was born in Oswego, Oswego county, New York, January 8, 1838. At the age of five years he removed with his parents to West Point Columbia county Wisconsin. During the war of the rebellion he responded to the call of his country and enlisted as a private in Company K, 45th, Regt. Wisconsin Volunteers Infantry, where he served faithfully till the close of the war. He was married to Saloma Stewart November 27, 1875. To them were born a daughter and son, who, together with his wife survive him. In 1886, he removed with his family to Kossuth county, Iowa. In the fall of 1890 he removed with his family to the state of Oregon, and since that time has resided near Lebanon, Linn county, where he died of heart failure April 26, 1895. He was a kind loving husband and father. Circumstances compelled him to support his family by manual labor. Sometimes he had a hard struggle but always tried to give them comfortable support. His friends and relatives and especially his wife and children will love to dwell on his kind genial ways and his manly traits which have endeared him to his fellow men. These he leaves in never dying fragrance to the memory.

His funeral was conducted by Rev. Summerville at the house of E. G. Carr, in Lebanon, Oregon, April 27.

"Sleep, comrade of the starry blue,
While softly fall our tears for you,
Loyal and brave, to country true,
Rest sweetly, soldier, rest.
Your toils and weary marches o'er,
Sorrow and pain for you no more,
Eternal life for evermore.
Sleep, soldier, sweetly sleep.

Rotten Morals.

Mayor McFadden of Corvallis, openly admits the rotten condition of morals in that city. In a message he says: "It has been currently asserted for weeks past by many reputable citizens of Corvallis, that there exists within this city a very diseased condition of morals that has reached the putrid stage; that disgraceful and licentious exhibitions, in which the daughters of Africa largely contributed have attracted sufficient general attention within a month past as to become current street talk and provoke editorial comment, from our city papers; that gaming and gambling are being carried on in direct violation of law and our streets and sidewalks at times are crowded with a class of gamblers, largely importations, who maintain a precarious existence by filching it from the unsuspecting at the gambling table and otherwise; that the laws of the city are being violated in the selling and disposing of spirituous and malt liquors in open houses on Sunday; that the general moral tone of the city is lower than at any other period within several years past.
