STATE AND COAST.

Clipped from our Exchanges Throughout the West.

Sam Hayden's majority for prosecuting attorney is nearly 2500.

Seventeen cars of sheep were shipped East from Arlington Wednesday.

J. B. Nobles, a Walla Walla county rancher, is driving a large band of horses to market in Montana.

Several of the Italian fishermen have left Astoria for California, and more will go on the next steamer.

The new altar at the Catholic church, in Gervais, was blessed by the Rev. Archbishop Cross last Sunday.

An old building was put on board a large wagon in Medford last week, and moved to a farm three miles south of town.

George Grayson, of Sheridan, has bought the North Yamhill and Trask river toll road, together with the hotel and stage stand.

An infant of Mr. and Mrs. Schlatter, of Gervais, last week, in some way unknown, got hold of concentrated lye and swallowed some of it. Death resulted soon after.

Ben Ryan, a miner, died in Grant's Pass last week from the effect of chloroform administered during a surgical operation to remove a cancerous growth from his lower jaw.

Each judge and clerk of election receives $3 a day of about eight hours and mileage for the judge taking the box to the county seat, a total cost in the county of nearly $1,000.

Superintendent of Instruction Irwin has issued a circular in which the information is given that arrangements have been made whereby text books will be furnished to all teachers where there are no depositories at the mailing price.

A. F. Hunt, the defeated republican nominee for sheriff in Jackson county, instead of taking the proverbial trip up Salt creek, has started for Dead Indian, with a good-sized band of fine looking cattle to fatten on the range there for fall beef.

Lincoln county republicans can sympathize with their brothers in Benton county over the results of the election. In Lincoln the republicans saved only the tail end of the ticket, while the populists and democrats took the lucrative offices.

There are many Indians from the Warm Springs reservation on Hood river, picking strawberries. The berry crop on the river is backward about ripening. Last Wednesday about 100 crates were shipped to Montana. At Butte, Hood river berries were selling for $7 a crate Thursday.

G. W. Perkins, of North Yamhill, says the Dayton Herald, created some amusement Tuesday. On learning of the success of the bimetalists, he tied a broom to his horse's tail and paraded the streets of that town. As he passed along, the bimetalists cheered while the republicans looked blue.

The entire corps of teachers at The Dalles public schools has been re-elected, with the exception of Professor W. N. Stratton, assistant principal, who declined to be a candidate for re-election. Professor J. S. Landers, late principal of the high school of Astoria, Ill., has been elected to succeed Professor Stratton.

During the Memorial day services at Twin Oak cemetery, near Turner, last Saturday, Mrs. W. J. B. McCulloch, aged about 50 years, dropped dead. She was of portly stature and subject to heart disease and just previous to the sad misfortune had overexerted herself in walking up the hill of the road leading to that burial place.

On Wednesday evening last Ed Hale and Charles Dobbins became involved in a fight at the Belvedere saloon, says the Heppner Gazette, during which Hale stabbed Dobbins in the neck, nearly reaching the jugular vein. Dobbins made a good fight, however, with nothing but nature's weapons for defense. Hale was arrested, but the Gazette learns that some sort of a settlement was reached.

There was a stalling affray at Dairy in Klamath county, on election day, and in the fracas Orin McCumber was badly cut up, receiving three ugly wounds, one in the abdomen, one in the shoulder and one over the eye and temple. It was thought that McCumber was seriously injured at first, and a courier was hastily dispatched to Klamath Falls for a physician. Dave Shook, in attempting to restore peace and quiet, received a bad cut across the back of the hand. An irate half breed Indian did the cutting and slaying. McCumber will recover.

THEY FISH IN PEACE.

Good Effect of the Presence of Militia on Baker's Bay.

ASTORIA, Or., June 4.—A prominent citizen of Ilwaco was in town today, and said that fishing is progressing peacefully throughout Baker's bay, under the protection of the Washington militia. The force at Ilwaco now consists of about 50 men. They have two steamers, protected on the outside with heavy railroad ties, and each mounting a cannon, carrying a detail of heavily-armed men, and constantly patrolling the bay day and night. There has been no attempt made recently by strikers to enter the bay or molest any of the working fishermen.

Seaborg's cannery is in operation and receiving all the fish it can conveniently handle, which are said to be of unusually fine size and quality.

A squad of regulars is also maintained on Sand Island, and is contributing materially to preserve the peace at that section of the bay and river.

A rumor is circulating here this evening, which is given considerable credence among those who have watched developments recently, that there have been more victims of violence on the part of the striking fishermen than those reported in the newspapers. A gentleman, who prefers not to have his name mentioned, says that there is evidence going to show that the occupants of the two fishing boats recently picked up in the river were foully dealt with. It will be remembered that one of these boats was brought to the city in a broken-up condition by one of the river steamers, having been found empty and floating in the river. This gentleman says positively that the boat left Astoria with two fishermen in it, who started out to do a little fishing on the sly. Neither of the men has been seen since.

It is known that the other boat also left here with nonunion fishermen in it, who have not returned, and there is good reason to believe all four of these men have been murdered.

Important Decision.

A San Francisco dispatch says that Charles Clark, receiver of the Oregon Pacific railroad, was awarded $23,000 in coin, the surplus of the sale of the steamship Willamette Valley, over which a number of creditors of the bankrupt company have been at law in the district court the past few months. Judge Morrow so decided in a lengthy opinion in the case of R. Chandler vs. the steamship Willamette Valley. Receiver Clark applied for the entire surplus, as the representative of the Oregon court, in whose possession the property of the Oregon Pacific is, and also as a claimant for the vessel. Counter petitions were filed by the master for his wages as master and pilot; by a judgment creditor, who had recovered a common-law judgment in the state courts; sureties who went on a bond to release the vessel when she was first libeled, and were compelled to pay the amount of the decree; by several insurance companies, as holders of receiver's certificates purporting to give them a prior lien in payment of premiums for insurance, and by other holders of certificates. The court awarded the entire surplus, less all costs, to the receiver on the ground that he was the representative of the owner, and primarily entitled to it, and on the ground that none of the petitioners, other than the holders of receiver's certificates, have any lien against the claim on the owner, and the petitioners holding receiver's certificates, whether they had any lien or not (which is not divided) the proper court to pass upon their rival claims was the receiver's court which issued the certificates and marshalled all the claims pending against the insolvent corporation which formally owned the vessel.

Carp on the Grass.

Carp are taking the country, says the Oregon City Enterprise, and pond, mudhole, stream and slough are alive with these imported fish, that are proving a great nuisance. Down in Columbia county they are digging up the roots of the grass in the overflowed meadows, and the farmers who own land along the sloughs affected by the periodical inundations are wroth and heaping curses on the head of the individual who first introduced the prolific carp into Oregon waters. Complaint is made that they are devouring other fish that are native to the country, and they are spreading everywhere. In fact, they are getting as thick as poplars. Since "General" Coxe was in Oregon City, if reports are true, they are feeding on the grass in the vicinity of the old circus ground on the hill. Isaac Farrar, the butcher, has a lively specimen of the carp about two and a half inches long in a can of water at his shop, which he found in the standing water that has collected in the ring of the old circus grounds on the hill. Mr. Farrar says there are numerous tiny specimens of young carp in the same collection of water, and at first it was a seven days' wonder where they came from. However, it is learned that some carp had been placed in a spring above the grounds, and it is probable that some of them had been washed down during a rainy day freshet, are keeping up their reputation for multiplying and replenishing the earth.

That the efforts of the Pacific Northwest Immigration Board are beginning to bear fruit is amply evidenced by the following dispatch received at the office of the board yesterday, from D. R. McGinnis, secretary of the Northwest Immigration Association, at St. Paul, Minn.:

"Fifteen settlers for Oregon via Northern Pacific last night; five more leave this morning." Letters received from Mr. McGinnis and from agents in Ohio and Indiana, who are working in the interests of immigration to Oregon, indicate that there is going to be at a very early date a large movement of farmers to this section. The St. Paul Dispatch, of recent date, has quite an article on the advantages to farmers of settling in the Pacific Northwest, and altogether the work of the immigration board gives promise at present of the addition of many hundreds of sturdy, worthy citizens to the population of this state in the very near future.—Oregonian.

"Do not drift into the critical habit," writes Ruth Ashmore in discussing "The Critical Girl," in June Ladies' Home Journal. "Have an opinion, and a sensible one, about everything, but when you come to judge people, remember that you see very little of what they really are, unless you winter and summer with them. Find the kindly, lovable nature of the man who knows little of books. Look for the beautiful self sacrifice made daily by some woman who knows nothing about pictures, and teach yourself day in and out to look for the best in every thing. It is the every-day joys and sorrows, my dear girl, that go to make up life. It is not the one great sorrow, nor the one intense joy, it is the accumulation of the little ones that constitute living; so do not be critical in the little faults, and be quick to find the little virtues and to praise them. So much that is good in people dies for want of encouragement. As I said before, have an opinion, and a well-thought-out one, about everything that comes into your life, but do not have too many opinions about people. Their hearts are not open books, and as you must be judged yourself some day, give them the kindest judgment now."

A Golden Occasion.

Oregon's golden anniversary will be celebrated in the exposition building in Portland on June 16. This will also be the 24th annual pioneer reunion. Hon. Geo. H. Williams will deliver the address and Mrs. Ella Higginson the poem. In 1840 by treaty with England Oregon became a part of the U. S. for certain, and hence the occasion is one deserving of special attention. The pioneers of 1840 will be the heroes of the occasion.
