

"And you—you—dare to repeat the cowardly lie of a confessed apy. This, then, is what you wished to tell me—this, the insult for which you have kept me here, because you are incupable of un lerstanding unselfish patriotism or devotion—even to your own cause—you dare to judge me by your own base, Yankee trading standards. Yes, it is worthy of you!"

She walked rapidly up and down, and then suddenly faced him.

"I understand it all! I appreciate your magnaninity now. You are willing I should join the company of these chivalrous gentlemen in order to give color to your calumnies. Say at once that it was you who put up this spy to correspond with me—to come here—in order to entrap me. Yes, entrap me—I—who a moment ago stood up for you before these gentlemen and said you could not lie! Bah!"

Struck only by the wild extrasa-

Struck only by the wild extrava-gance of her speech and temper, Clar-ence did not know that when women are most illogical they are upt to be most sincere, and from a man's standmost sincere, and from a man's stand-point, her unreasoning deductions ap-peared to him only as an affectation to gain time for thought, or a theatrical display to dazzie, like Susy's. And he was turning, half contemptuously, away when she again faced him with flashing eyes:

"Well, hear me! I accept! I leave here at once to join my own people, my here at once to join my own people, my own friends—those who understand me -put what construction on it that you choose. Do your worst! You cannot do more to separate us than you have done just now."

She left him and ran up the steps.

with an extravagant return of her old occasional nymph-like gracefulness— the movement of a woman who has never borne children—and a swish of her long skirts that he remembered for many a day after as she disappeared in the corridor.

He remained looking after her—in-dignant, outraged and—unconvinced! Then there was a rattling at the gate.

He remembered he had locked it. He opened it to the flushed, pink cheeks and dancing eyes of Susy. The rain was still dripping from her wet cloak, as she awung it from her shoulders. "I know it all, all that's happened," she burst out, with half girlish exuber-ance, and half the actress' declamation. "We met them all in the road, posse and "We met them all in the road, posse and prisoners. Chief Thompson knew me and told me all. And so you've done it—and you're master in your old house again. Clarence, old boy! Jim said you wouldn't do it. Said you'd weaken on account of her! But I said 'No,' I knew you better, old Clarence, and I saw it in your face, for all your stiffness! He! But for all that I was mighty negrous and uncest and I just stiffness! He! But for all that I was mighty nervous and uneary, and I just made Jim send an excuse to the theater, and we rushed it down here. Lordy, but it looks natural to see the old house ligain! And she—you packed her off with the others, didn't you? Tell me, Clarence," in her old appealing voice, "you shook her, too?"

Dazed and astounded, and yet expressing a vague sense of relief with an odd return of hisold tenderness towards the willful woman before him, he had silently regarded her until her allusion to his wife recalled him to himself. "Hush!" he said, quickly, with a glance towards the corridor.

glance towards the corridor.

"Ah!" said Susy, with a malicious smile, "then that's why Capt. Pinckney was lingering in the rear with the nee!" said Clarence, sternly. "Go in there," pointing to the garden room below the baleony, "and wait until your husband comes."

He half led, half pushed her into the m which had been his business office nd returned to the patio. A hesitating pice from the balcony said: "Clar-

It was his wife's voice, but modified had first heard it-or as if it were chastened by some reminiscence of those days. It was his wife's face, too, those days. It was his wife's face, to that looked down on his, paler than h had seen it since he had entered to was shawled and hooded, carrying a traveling-bag in her hand

"I am going, Clarence," she said, with gentle gravity, "but not fit anger! I even ask you to forgive me for the foolish words that I still think your still more foolish accusation," she smiled faintly, "dragged from me. I am going because I know that I have brought, and that while I am here I shall always be bringing upon you the imputation and even the responsibility of my own faith! While I am proud to own it, and, if needs be, suffer for it, I have no right to ruin your prospects, or even make you the victim of the siurs that anne you the victim of the stirrs that others may cast upon me. Let us part as friends, separated only by our dif-ferent political faiths, but keeping all other faiths together, until God shall settle the right of this struggle. Per-haps it may be soon—I sometimes think may be years of agony for all-but until then good-by." Sie had slowly descended the steps to the patio, looking bandsomer than he had ever seen her, and as if sustained and upheld by the enthusiasm of her enuse. Her hand was outstretched toward his, his heart beating violently; pointed to the chair on which susy cloak was hanging.

"What's that?" she said, in a sharp,
"What's thet?" who is here. high, metallic voice. " Speak!"
"Susy," said Clarence.

"Susy," said Clarence.
She cast a scathing glunce around the patio and then settled her piercing eyes on Clarence with a bitter smile.
"Already!"

"Already!"
Clarence felt the blood rush to his face as he stammered: "She knew what was happening here and came to give you warning."
"Liar!"

"Stop!" said Clarence, with a white face. "She came to tell me that Capt. Pinckney was still lingering for you in the road."

the road."

He threw open the gate to let her pass. As she swept out she lifted her hand. As she closed the gate there were the white marks of her four fingers on

CHAPTER IV.

CHAPTER IV.

For once Susy had not exaggerated.

Capt. Pinckney was lingering with the deputy who had charge of him on the trail near the casa. It had already been pretty well understood by both captives and captors that the arrest cas simply a legal demonstration, that hie sympathizing federal judge would indoubtedly order the discharge of the prisoners on their own recognizances and it was probable that the deputy saw and it was probable that the deputy saw to harm in granting Pinckney's re-juest, which was virtually only a delay in his own liberation. It is also possible that Pinckney had worked upon the chivalrous sympathies of the man by professing his disinclination to leave heir devoted colleague, Mrs. Brant, at the mercy of her antagonistic and cold-tooded husband at such a crisis, and it s to be feared, also, that Clarence, as a s to be reared, asso, that Carence, as a eputed lukewarm partiaan, excited no personal sympathy even from his own party. Howbeit, the deputy agreed to delay Pinckney's journey for a parting interview with his fair hostess.

How far this expressed the real sen-timents of Capt. Pinckney was never known. Whether his political associa-tion with Mrs. Brant had developed into a warmer solicitude, understood or ig nored by her, and what were his hopes and aspirations regarding his fitture was by the course of fate never dis-closed. A man of easy ethics but rigid artificialities of honor, flattered and artinealities of honor, flattered and compered by class prejudice, a so-called "man of the world," with no experience beyond his own limited circle, yet brave and devoted to that, it were well, perhaps, to leave that hast act of his ineffectual life to the simple record of the density. of the deputy.

of the deputy.

Dismounting, he approached the house from the garden. He was already familiar with the low arched doorway which led to the business room, and from which he could gain admittance to the patio. But it so chanced that he entered the dark passage at the mo-ment that Clarence had thrust Susy into the business room, and heard its door thut sharply. For an instant he be-lieved that Mrs. Brant had taken refge there, but as he cautiously moved orward he heard her voice in the patio beyond. Its accents struck him as pleading; an intense curiosity drew him further along the passage. Suddenly her voice seemed to change to angry denunciation, and the word "Liar" rang upon his ears. It was followed by his own name uttered aardonically by Clar-ence, the swift rustle of a skirt, the clash of the gate, and then forgetting everything, he burst into the patio.

Clarence was just turning from the gate with the marks of his wife's hand still red on his white cheek. He saw Capt. Pinckney's eyes upon it, and a faint, half-malicious, half-hysteric smile upon his lips. But without a start or gesture of surprise, he locked the gate, and turning to him, said, with frigid significance:

"I thank you for returning so promptly, and for recognizing the only thing I 17, and for recognizing the only thing I now require at your hands." But Capt. Pinckney had recovered his supercilious case with the signifi-cant demand.

You seem to have had something already from another's hand, sir—out I am at your service," he said, lightly. "You will consider that I have no cepted it from you, sir," said Clarence drawing closer to him with a rigid face. "I suppose it will not be neces-sary for me to return it—to make you understand me."

on," said Pinckney, flushing iy. "Make your terms. I am slightly.

ready."
"But I'm not," said the unexpected voice of the deputy at the grille of the gateway. "Excuse my interfering, gen-tlemen, but this sort o' thing ain't down in my schedule. I've let this gentle-man," pointing to Capt Pinckney. "off for a minit to say good-by to a indy, who, I reckon, has just ridden off in her buggy with her servant, without saying by your leave—but I don't cal-berlate to let him inter another business which, like as not, will prevent me from deliverin' his body safe and sound into ourt. You hear me!" As Clarence pened the gate he added: "I don't want ter spoil sport between gents, but it's got to come in after I've done my

"I'll meet you, sir, anywhere, and in another moment he might have for-getten all and clasped her to his breast. Suddenly she stopped, her out-stretched arm stiffened, her finger is giver." He was furfous at the reflec-tion that Mrs. Frant had escaped him. A different thought was in the hun-band's mind. "But what assurance have

I that you are going on with the dep-nty?" he said, with purposely insulting deliberation.

"My word, sir," said Capt. Pinckney.

"My word, sir," said Capt. Pinckney, sharply,
"And if that ain't enuff, there's mine," said the deputy. "For if this gentleman swerves to the right or left betwint this and Santa Inea, l'Irbiow a hole through him ryselft. And that," he added, deprecatingly, "is saying a good deal for a man who doesn't want to spoil aport, and, for the matter of that, is willing to stand by and see fair play done at Santa Inez any time tomorrow before breakfast." morrow before breakfast."

morrow before breakfast."

"Then I can count on you?" said Charence, with a saiden impulse, extending his hand.

The man lessitated a moment, and then grasped it. "Well, I wagn't expecting that." he said, slowly; "but you look as if you meant business, and if you ain't got anybody else to see you through. I'm thar! I suppose this gentleman will have his friends."

"I shall be there at six with my seconds," said Pincksey, curtly. "Lead

onds," said Pinckney, curtly. "Lead

The gate closed behind them. Clar ence looked around the now emply patio, and the silent house, from which he could now see that the servants had been withdrawn to insure the secrecy of the gathering. Cooland collected as he knew he was, he stood still-for a moment in hesitation. Then the sound of voices came to his ear from the gar-den room, the light frivolity of Susy's laugh, and Hooker's huskier accents He had forgotten they were there—he had even forgotten their existence.

Trusting still to his calmuess, he called to Hooker in his usual voice. That gentleman appeared with a face which his attempts to make uncon-cerned and impassive had, however, only deepened his funereal gravity.

"I have something to attend to," said Clarence, with a faint smile, "and I must ask you and Susy to excuse me for a little while. She knows the house perfectly, and will call the servant from the annex to provide you 50th with refreshments. I will join you a little later." Satisfied from Hooker's manner that they knew nothing of his later interview with Pinckney he turned away and ascended to his own

He then threw himself into an arm chair by the dim light of a single candle as if to reflect, but he was conscious even then, of his own calmness and want of excitement, and that no reflection was necessary. What he had done and what he intended to do was quite clear; there was no alternative suggested, or to be even sought after. He had that sense of relief which omes with the climax of all great struggles—even of defeat. He had never known before how hopeless and continuous had been that struggle un-til now it was over. He had no fear for to-morrow; he would meet it as he had to-day with the same singular con-sciousness of being equal to the occa-sion. There was even no necessity of preparation for it; his will leaving his fortune to his wife—which seemed a slight thing now in this greater separa-tion—was already in his safe in San Francisco; his pistols were in the next room. He was even slightly disturbed by his own meensibility and passed into his wife's bedroom, partly in the hope of disturbing his serenity by some memento of their past. There was no disorder of flight-everything was in its place except the drawer of her deak, which except the drawer of her deak, which was still open as if she had taken something from it as an afterthought. There were letters and papers there—some of his own and some in Capt. Pinckney's handwriting. It did not occur to him to look at them—even to justify himself—or excuse her. He knew that his hatred of Capt. Pinckney was not so much that he believed him her lover, as his sudden conviction that they were allike! He was the male of her species —a being antagonistic to himself whom -a being antagonistic to himself whom he could fight and crush and revenge himself upon. But most of all he leathed his past, not on account of her, but of his own weakness that had made him her dupe, and a mlaunderstood man to his friends. He had been derelict of duty in his selfish devotion to her; he had stifled his ambition, and un rated his own possibilities—no wonder that others had accepted him at his own valuation. Clarence Brant was a modest man, but the egotism of modesty is more fatal than that of pretension, for it has the haunting consciousness of superior virtue.

He reentered his own room and again threw himself in his chair. His value was being succeeded by a physical weariness; he remembered he had not slept the night before and he ought to take some rest to be fresh in the early morning. Yet he must also show him-self before his self-invited guests, Susy and her husband, or their suspicions would be aroused. He would try sleep for a little while in the chair, be fore he went downstairs again. He closed his eyes oddly enough on a dim, dreamy recollection of Susy, of the old days in the little Madrono hollow days in the little Madrono hollow where she had once given him a ren-deryous. He forgot the maturer and critical uneasiness with which he had then received her coquettish and willful advances which he now knew was the effect of the growing do and remembered only her bright, youthful eyes, and the kisses he had pressed upon her soft, fragrant cheeks. The faintness he had felt when awaiting in the old rose gar-den, a few hours ago, seemed to steal on him once more, and to lapse into a delicious drowsiness. He even seemed again to inhale the perfume of the

He started. He had been sleeping-looked in the old days!

For with a flash of her old audacity, added by her perfect knowledge of the house, and the bunch of houseload eye as the hast found, which daugled from her girdle, as in the old fashion, she had disinterred one of her old frocks a one a closet, slipped it on, and bookening her brown hair had let it fall in repsing waves down her back. It was stated of the grown netrees he the ar-rangement of her short shart over her pretty nikles, and the half-conscious pow she had taken.

"Poor, dear old Clarence," she said "Poor, dear old Chremee," she said with dancing eyes, "I might have won a dozen pairs of gloves from you while you shept there. But you're treed, near old boys and you're had a basel time of it. No matter—you've also good so man at last!—and I'm proper of you. If if ashamed of the pleasare he felt, teen in his embarrassment, Chremee tangement? "But this change—this dreas!"

Susy clapped her hands like a child.

Susy clapped her hands like a child Susy chapped her hands like a chind it know it would surprise you! It's an old fruck I wore the year I went away with aunty. I knew where it was hidden, and fished it out again with these keys, Clarence-it seemed so like old times. Lord! when I was with the old acreants again—and you didn't com-down—I just felt as if I'd never beer away, and I just rampaged free! seemed to me, don't you know, no if I'd just come-but as if I'd niways wen right here—and it was you who's not come! Don't you understand hast as you came when me and Mar-liogers were here—don't you remembe her. Clarence, and how she used to d her, Clarence, and how she used to de-gooseberry' for un!—well—inst like that. So I said to Jim—'I don't know you any more—get!' and I just slipped on this frock and ordered Mannela around, as I used to do—and she in fits of laughter—I reckon, Clarence, she hast't laughed as much since I lef'. And then I thought of you—perhaps worried and flustered yet over things and the change, and I just slipped into the kitchen, and I told old fat Conchita to make some of these tertilias, you the kitchen, and I told old fat Conchita to make some of these tortillas, you know — with sugar and cinnamon sprinkled on top—and I tied on an aprox, and brought emup to you on a tray with a glass of that old Catalan wine you used to like. Then I sorter feit frightened when I got here and I didn't here any roise and I say that they didn't hear any noise, and I put the tray down in the hall and peeped in and found you asleep. Sit still, I'll fetch

She tripped out into the passage returning with the tray which she put on the table beside Chrence, and the standing back a little and with h hands tucked soubrette fashion in the tiny pockets of her apron, guzed a him with a mischievous smile.

It was impossible not to smile bac' as he sibbled the crisp Mexican caland drank the old musion wine. An Susy's tongue trilled an accompan-ment to his thanks.

ment to his thanks.

"Lord! it seems so nice to be berright you and me, Clarence—like in the old days—with nobody noggin! as mospin, round after you. Do. 1 if recedy, Clarence, but give me a c. ke. the took one and finished the drugs as his glass.

(To be continued.)

BUSINESS LOCALS.

When you want bargains go to the racket store.

I have money to loan at 8 per cer interest on good farm or personal security, J. M. Ralston, Maston Block, Albany, Or.

Measure your rooms accurately and bring size in feet and inches with you. It costs you nothing to have your carpets sewed by hand by the Albany Furniture Co., Albany, Oregon.

Ladies, I invite your attention to my new and extensive line of flowerst fancy straws and beautiful ribbons., Opening day about the first of April. MISS A. DUMOND.

Ladies cloth, all wool, 36 inches wide, 29 cts. per yard-cash, at Rend, Pencock & Co.fe.

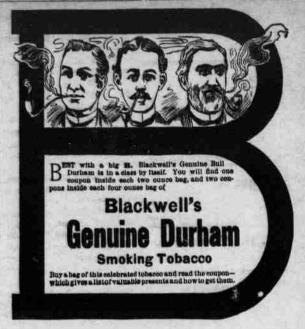

During our closing out sale no goods will be sold except for spot cash. READ, PEACOCK & CO.

Ladies, Miss Dumond offers you better bargains in bats than ever before. Trimmed hats from $1 to $5. Sailors, 20c and up. Look in at the windows as you pass by.

The Ladies' Bazaar, of Albany, Or., will send a fashion plate, of the latest styles, to all persons who write to then mentioning the Express. Their stone of goods is better than ever this year. Call on them when in Albany.

Young man, you are thinking some thing about your sweetheart, and you but the voice sounded strangely real.

A little girlish laugh followed. He sprang to his feet. It was Susy, standing beside hits—and Susy even as she way down to suit your rerdy cash.

Victors Are Best.

Victor Non Puncturable Tire, No. 103, is the lightest running wheel on earth. The best is the cheapest in the end. Largest stock of second-hand wheels on the coast, Everything as represented. Write for list.

Headquarters for sundries and athletic goods, 130 Sixth Street and 311 Alder Street, Portland, Oregon.

OVERMAN WHEEL COMPANY.

W. B. KERNAN, Manager.

H. Y. Kirkpatrick,

Local Agent,

Lebanon, Oregon.

Albany Furniture Co.

(INCORPORATED)

BALTIMORE BLOCK, Albany, Oregon.

Furniture, Carpets, Linoleums, matting, etc. Pictures and Picture molding.

Undertaking a Specialty.

& Eastern

R. R. CO. Yaquina Bay Route.

Connecting at Yaquina Bay with the San Francisco and Yaquina Bay Steamship Company.

Steamship "Farallon"

Sails from Yaquina Bay every eight days for San Francisco, Coos Bay, Port Orford, Trinidad and Humboldt Bay.

Passeng r Accommoda tions Unsurpassed. Shortest Route Between the Williamette Valley and California.

Fare from Albany and Points West to San Francisco:

To Coos Bay and Port Orford:

To Humboldt Bay:

Round Trip Good for 60 Days-Special. RIVER DIVISION.

Steamers "ALBANY" and "WM. M. HOAG," newly farmished, leave Albany daily, except Satordays, at S.A. M., arriving at Portlands the same day at S.F. M.
Returning, boats leave Portland same days as above at 6.4. M., arriving at Albany at 7.36 F. M.S.
EDWIS STOKE. Sup't River Division, Manager. H. B. Saony, H. L. Walden, Ag't, Opp Revere House Agent, Depot Albany.

To The Mothers.

You have nice children, you know and nothing pleases them better than a nice nobby suit of clothes that keeps them warm and healthy. Baker h will want to look nice when in the presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of you stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of your stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of your stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of your stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of your stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of your stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of your stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence, so buy the latest styles of your stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence at the latest styles of your stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence at the latest styles of your stand $1.00 for a suit or control presence at the latest styles of your stand $1.00 for a suit or your stand $1.00 for a suit or your stand $1.00

regon Central BARBER SHOP

Best Shaves, Hair Cut or Shampoo

B. F. KIRK'S

Shaving Parlor.

NEXT DOOR TO ST. CHARLES HOTEL.

Elegant Baths.

Children Kindly Treated.

Ladies Hair Dressing a Specialty.

Ripans Pabules ours discious

DU CONCO