A PLAIN STATEMENT.

We might as well be plain. The forces of the Hanna ring are now at work in our very midst. Active but secret work is being done. The weak-kneed republicans are being encouraged in every possible way. Influence is being brought to bear upon democrats and populists to coax or to frighten them to vote for McKinley. The Hanna crowd is well organized. The central head supplies all the rural precincts with brains as well as money. A shrewd, active and persistent campaign is being waged, with plenty of money for hall hire, badges, emblems and excursions. The money for all these things is not contributed at home, because the participants can't afford it. The money is being disbursed from Portland to different clubs. The money comes from outside parties, trusts, corporations and the like. This distributes considerable ready money among the people. Thus far it is all right. But there is food for serious thought in this matter. The free will of the voter is thus influenced by fear or by reward. The money of the trusts, wrung from the people at first, is being used to influence the peoples' vote. All of this pernicious activity has its effect. But few men can be reached by actual bribery. A large number are influenced by party organization backed by a full treasury. In this way, it is hoped to elect McKinley. Bryan men cannot hope to offset this work by similar effort. They have no money. The centers of money are locked tight against him while they open freely to McKinley. But there is a way to circumvent Hanna and his shrewd and unscrupulous healers. Let every man who favors the people rather than the corporations, be himself active and ceaseless in his efforts from now till election night. Do not be coaxed or bullied into voting for any man who is the recognized champion of monopolies and who is groomed by such an arch enemy of the people as Marcus Aurelius Hanna.

COLD FACTS.

The New York World, opposed to Bryan, publishes the following letter by its great correspondent Creelman:
"Bryan may be defeated, but the influence of money and of Mark Hanna's methods upon the voters of Wisconsin, in common with the voters of other states, will not disappear after election day.
Let me give one example. I speak of a matter I know and understand. The Reliance machine works, owned by the Edward P. Allis Company, are situated in Milwaukee. There are employed in this establishment something like 1800 men. Here the Bryan sentiment is very strong.
It is an absolute fact that 18 working men in this establishment are at this moment on the pay-roll of the republican state committee as secret political agitators. Their companions are ignorant of this fact and do not suspect it.
The result is that these men have an influence which they could not possibly wield were the truth known.
The republican committee has also, I am informed, upon its pay-rolls a large number of men in another establishment, which employs about 2000 workmen. In several of the factories here gold standard arguments are pinned each week to the envelopes containing wages."
Will the time ever come when the common people will know the truth, that their bitterest enemy is the republican party now bossed by Hanna and Quay.

McKinley's idea of protection and of money, if put into practice will inevitably encourage strikes and pauperism.

THE COUNTRY MORTGAGED.

The great corporations of the country have contributed several millions to Hanna's campaign fund, as is generally believed, corporations have no souls, therefore these financial gifts were not from the goodness of their souls. It was a business investment. Corporations don't place their money without good security. There is but one security that could be given. Hanna has mortgaged the republican party to these corporations. These millions will find their way back into the coffers of these corporations by legislation and executive favors. The people will have to pay the mortgage by increased burdens, and the trusts will tighten their grip on the industry, energy and labor of the masses. Such is republicanism.

Possibly unwillingly, but nevertheless tightly bound to trusts and corporations, Wm. McKinley is the leader of the enemies of the people. Left to his own better judgment, he might favor the peoples' interest. Bound as he is, he can only do the bidding of the men who are giving their gold that he may be president. McKinley is a good man, but his ambition and the counsel of his friends, have forced him forever in the ranks of the oppressors of the people. Cleveland, during his first term, was a sturdy champion of the people. He has changed under the burden of his great honors. Hence today, his name is dear, not to the masses, but to the trusts. He and McKinley differ only in name. They are conspiring to the same end. Let the one go and the other remain forever in retirement. The name of neither can ever bring hope to suffering mankind. The one has betrayed his trust, the other would do it if the chance is ever given him. Old party lines should have very little bearing in this election. The people should combine their forces, regardless of politics, and vote for the man whose life proves him their friend, William J. Bryan.

The people would like to know something more about Mr. McKinley. They would like to hear him talk about the issues of the day. These little delegation speeches that he makes from his door step to excursion parties, has too much of the secretiveness of Hanna. Let him get out among the people and talk. A joint debate in New York City, for instance, between McKinley and Bryan would greatly enlighten the people. Neither would lose his dignity, and neither would be thought less of for mingling with the people. If Bryan is the rattle brain fellow that Hanna says he is, why then McKinley ought to be glad of the chance to prove it. May be the gallant Major does not want to monkey with the buzz-saw. He might get laid up for repairs.

Senator Mitchell thinks more of his seat than he does of his head—More of his return to the senate than of the success of free silver, the conviction of his life.

Senator Mitchell's political somersault into the gold camp was graceful indeed, but the many converts to silver made by his eloquent and logical speeches heretofore, will not so easily change.

The American people still love a circus. Several hundred went to Albany Monday to see a United States Senator turn a political somersault.

Politicians are said to have their price. Senator Mitchell's price was rather steep—a seat in the U. S. senate.

Mitchell republicans defeated Dolph for the senate two years ago. Dolph could have then been elected, if he had been a political acrobat like Mitchell.

The trusts are for McKinley because McKinley is for the trusts.

The people are for Bryan, because Bryan is for the people.

Intimidation of workmen is still being done by Hanna and his men.

The laborer and farmer have nothing to hope for in Hanna's triumph.

Dolph is a cold, selfish man, but he is not of easy political virtue like Mitchell.

If Bryan is elected prosperity will return.
