DOES THIS MEAN A HARD WINTER.

Last Friday morning when Frank Young of Gooseberry, went to his chicken house to feed, he found that about six dozen of his fine Plymouth rock hens were gone. Investigation showed that a Badger had dug its way under the house and taken all these large hens to its hole near by. Mr Young dug down and found four dozen of them, some still alive, and still more under, but he covered the hole and stopped digging. Before he abandoned the job, however, he had killed Mr Badger and is in hopes the rest of his fowls are safe. It would appear that the wild animals are laying in a supply looking forward to a cold winter.

JORDAN SIDING FIRE DEPARTMENT DOES GOOD WORK.

Bill Thompson got a clean spirit the other day and set fire to some brush. This blew over and set fire to a bridge on the Swaggart and Mill's place and had it not been for the prompt work of the "Jordan Siding Fire Department and Bucket Brigade", the bridge would have gone.

SEYMOUR WILSON RENTS HIS RANCH.

Seymour Wilson will go to California for a while where his mother is living and has rented his ranch on Willow creek as well as his wheat land to Mr Broshers. Mr Broshers is to be congratulated upon having possession of such a fine place, while Mr Wilson could not have left it in better hands.

A MODEL FARM NEAR IONE.

A trip up Rhea creek and a day spent at the fine farm home of French Burroughs, a dinner eaten at a table that fairly groaned under its load of good things, was the happy fate of the family of the editor of the Great Family Paper, THE PROCLAIMER, the other Sunday. Upon entering the grounds we drove several hundred feet and then up to the house where a hearty welcome greeted us. Our horse was fed and we were treated to some fine Bartlett pears and then started for a round of the creek farm. When we left the house and entered the barnyard the first thing that struck our eyes was "whitechickens". Many did you say? Gee whiz, there were hundreds of them, and showy white. Then we saw turkeys, about fifty of them, half grown and most of them with tiny bells on their necks. Geese and ducks also, but these were swimming on the creek and dived to get the grain that was thrown to them. The great fine horses came and rubbed their heads against us and wanted to get the petting we so readily gave. Then out to the orchard where the trees are heavy with apples, prunes and winter pears, even this year of small fruit returns. The peach trees were bare, there being only a very few. Several times we crossed the creek that so prettily winds its way thru the farm, and entered another enclosure where many more beautiful white chickens were kept. On our way out we had passed a coop where was kept a guinea fowl with some little ones, the prettiest things a person ever saw. And near the house is a pair of peacocks, with one small one. The cows came to water and were sleek and well cared for, (no need for any question of purity of this milk supply) and the large barn was filled with hay and grain, while all about on the bottom land was many more stacks ready when needed. Many lives of bees feed upon the alfalfa and the honey is white and good. Potatoes of such a size that three will feed a haying crew, are there also in large quantities, while a visit, upon a return to the house, to a cool milk house showed cream, and butter not only in quantity, but of such quality as to make a man glad he was to eat some of it.

After dinner we feasted upon cooled watermelons that had been raised on the place, and wished we could call such a place home, and also wished a few of the city people could have such a day.

The chickens alone on this place bring a net value of about one thousand dollars each year, and this has nothing to do with the rest of the fowls.

There is much more we would like to tell, but space forbids, but will add that about the whole place there is an air of comfort and cleanliness not often met with. If you want a nice day, go up and see these good people and you will find we have not told half the story of good farming, that is there.

NEW FARM MANAGEMENT.

Jack Hughes has leased the ranch of Frank Holmes and with his good horses will soon begin to turn over the soil for summer fallow and plant his wheat for next year. This is a good ranch and Mr Hughes will make it pay excellently. He has a three year lease and has purchased all the farm implements on the place.
