SCHOOL NOTES.

Through the courtesy of our editor, this space has been given to our Public School for the publishing of items of school news. We have planned to make use of this privilege, frequently, in publishing such items, as may prove of interest to the friends and patrons of the school.

Last Friday closed our third week of school, and all are progressing nicely. The pupils are interested in their work and all will work toward making this year a success.

In room 1, the primary room, the attendance number twenty-three, and there has been only one absence. This is a good beginning for the small children.

Room 2 has an enrollment of twenty-seven and has had three absence, these on account of sickness. The pupils in this room are proud of two new maps.

There are eighteen pupils in room 3 and there has been four absent.

Room 4 has an enrollment of twenty pupils and only one has been absent.

Room 5, the High School room, has thirteen pupils with no absence. Although few in number we can do better work and are, one and all, proud of our High School.

Mrs E. L. Padberg was visiting in room 1 and 2 last Friday afternoon.

The boys have taken quite a lively interest in football and have "booted" the ball so vigorously that already a new one is needed.

The girls are talking of organizing a basket-ball team but the fact that the only suitable floor space in town, the skating rink, has been converted into a storage warehouse may put a check on their plans. It is to be regretted that this splendid hardwood floor, that could furnish us with space for many a winter evening's recreation and amusement, is to be closed to the public.

This is splendid weather for school days and the work shows a decided improvement over that done when it is so warm.

OPAL COCHRAN,

Correspondent for this week.

WATSON-AKERS.

Last Sunday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr and Mrs Frank Akers, of Ione, was the scene of a quiet home wedding when Ernk Victoria Akers became the bride of William Watson. The bride is well known in Ione, having lived here all her life, and claiming Gooseberry as her birth place some eighteen years ago.

The groom came to this place about three years ago from Turner Oregon where his family lives and are highly respected.

The ceremony was nicely performed by Justice E. T. Perkins who has known the bride since her childhood and who was the natural one to say the words that changed her whole life lines.

The young couple went to Arlington and caught the overland train Sunday night going to Grangeville, Idaho where Mr Watson has a house ready for his wife and where they will make their home in the future.

The good wishes of all the people of Ione follow them.

OVER HEPPNER WAY.

Last Saturday it became the duty of the editor of this paper to go to Heppner and pay the bunch of taxes that THE PROCLAIMER had stacked against it. And while in that city it was our pleasure to meet many of the people of that goodly burg and eat a good dinner at the Palace Hotel. Up at the court house every thing was in the best of good running gear and all seem happy and optimistic about the town.

A visit to Mr Earhart found him in the best kept county jail in this land, thanks to Sheriff Shutt's fine management, and Earhart seemed glad to be remembered by a visit.

We here in Ione, as well as the county at large, should be proud of our County Seat and they up there should be glad that they have brought down such a fine wheat land as this is here about Ione.

HE MADE ONE MISTAKE.

Quaint Persian Tale of the Taming of the Shrew.

In Persia a wealthy man will often have a friend of whose society he is fond living in the house with him. Abdullah was such a friend to Aly Khan, a very wealthy and influential merchant of Isfahan, who was delighted with his charm and cleverness and so pleased with his services that he thought he would make a very good son-in-law and suggested him as such to his beautiful daughter. She was very overbearing and bad tempered; but, thinking that Abdullah was rather good looking, she agreed to it. They were married. Soon his friends came to congratulate him, among these Housseyn, who was known to have a very overbearing and bad tempered wife. He said, "I congratulate you on your marriage," and then he asked the bridegroom, "Are you really happy with a woman who is known to have such a bad temper?" "I assure you that she is perfectly charming and that I am perfectly happy." "May I ask how you manage it?"

"Certainly," answered Abdullah. "On the night of the marriage I went into her apartments in full uniform with my sword on. She did not take any notice of me, but put on a supercilious air and made a parade of stroking her cat. I quietly picked up her cat and cut off his head with my sword, took the head in one hand, the body in the other and threw them out of the window. My wife was amazed, but did not show it. After a few seconds she broke into a smile and has been a most submissive and charming wife ever since."

Housseyn went straight home and put on his uniform and went into the harem. The domestic pet came to greet him. He seized it with the hand that was accustomed to carry it, drew his sword and with a single blow decapitated it. At the same moment he received a blow in the face delivered by his shrewish wife and before he recovered from his astonishment a second and a third. "I can see to whom you have been talking," the lady hissed, "but you are too late. It was on the first day that you ought to have done this."
