Took Him for Tom.
"George Moore, the author of Esther Waters, likes to talk," said a magazine editor of New York. "about his own obscurity, very obscure. Lunching with me one day at Claridge's, he said he had recently met a young American girl whose warm praise had pleased him much."
"We think a heap of your writings out Kansas way, Mr. Moore," the young girl said.
"How jolly!" cried the novelist. "And what story of mine do the good people of Kansas like best?"
"Oh, Lalla Rookh, far and away!" said she.

COUGHED ALL NIGHT

Till This Recipe Was Tried. Cure Followed in Five Hours.

A prominent medical man who suffered with a severe cough and cold on the lungs, often being kept awake all night, and weakened by loss of sleep, finally discovered a simple formula which will cure any cough in five hours by the clock. It is a laxative tonic cough syrup which can be made at home by any one and the formula is here given for the benefit of those who pass sleepless nights in pain and worry. Those who have tried it say it is magical and beats any high-priced, slow-acting cough medicine ever sold.
Mix in a bottle, one-half ounce fluid wild cherry bark, one ounce compound essence cardui and three ounces syrup white pine compound. Take twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then take one-half to one teaspoonful three or four times a day. Give children less according to age. This will tone up and rid the system of deep-seated coughs every time.

Supreme Test.
"There," remarked the dentist, as he took off the rubber dam, "you'll never show on a piece of beefsteak tough enough to loosen that filling."
"But, doctor," queried the sweet young thing with the tooth equally sweet, "will it stay in when I eat caramels and molasses candy?"

Avoid Your Friends.
"I hear you spent your vacation with friends." "We were friends during the first week."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Allments of Men Happily Overcome SUCCESSFULLY TRIED BY MANY.

Undoubtedly the following prescription will work wonders for that great class of men who, through dissipation of their natural strength, find themselves in their second childhood, long before the three score and ten allotted to life's pleasures and enjoyments are reached.
It is presumed to be inflexible and highly efficient in quickly restoring to nervous exhaustion, weak vitality, melancholia and the functions.
First get fifty cents' worth of compound fluid balneum in a one-ounce tincture, and three ounces syrup sarsaparilla compound; take home, mix and let stand two hours; then get one ounce compound essence cardui and one ounce tincture endosperm compound (not carboxin). Mix all in a six or eight ounce bottle, shake well, and take one teaspoonful after each meal and one when retiring, followed by a drink of water.
By mixing it at home no man need be the victim of another's shortcomings, and expensive fees are avoided.
Loss of poise and equilibrium in men is a constant source of embarrassment even when the public least suspects it. For the benefit of those who want a restoration to their healthy health, and all the happiness accompanying it, the above best treatment is given. It contains no opium or habit-forming drugs. Therefore, it is safe for use and will be the best in your arsenal.

WHEN FATHER KNOWS IT ALL.

When company comes to our place That's when dad's mouth sets the pace— You ought to hear him talk! He reels off stuff on freight car loads, On weather signs and brick-paved roads, An' billiard chalk.

He'll speak of baseball, congress, soil, The price o' meat an' lawnmower oil; An' add some more About the life on Mars, an' auto tires An' how to put out coal mine fires, When once he has, the floor.

Things we thought he didn't know Off his tongue just seem to flow As slick as candle grease;

He gives the cure for roup in hens, The principles o' fountain pens, Why Russhyer wanted peace,

When Roosevelt's due to come back home, The best points in an art glass dome Or real estate affairs, Why women spend too much on dress, The proper moves in games o' chess, An' breedin' Belgian hares.

Then, well warmed up, he'll turn to beans, An' life on board the submarines, Or 'splain the income tax, An' how to judge good fishin' lines An' different kinds o' foreign wines— An' state a million facts.

Everything he says has points to it, Even his jokes and streaks o' wit When company's at our house; Though when there ain't, he don't say much, An' keeps his face closed round our hutch As quiet as a mouse.

It's when there's visitors to listen That he cuts loose with that gab o' his'n, An' never gets a call, But often I see ma just grin Like she was holdin' someth'n in— When father knows it all.

MEN WHO KNEW WHEN TO QUIT.

Financial Giants Who Did Not Play the Game Till It Killed Them.
A comment not infrequently heard in Wall street runs thus: "John D. Rockefeller was the wisest of them all. He knew when to quit." So did Andrew Carnegie. So, more recently, did James Stillman. H. H. Rogers was trying to throw off his harness when struck down.

The New York Journal of Commerce says the two grand old men in the financial world whose health never seems to trouble them are J. P. Morgan and James J. Hill. Neither is ever reported as suffering from nervous breakdown or as being compelled to visit the spas of Europe. These two old friends and associates jog along quietly but very effectively year after year, doing big things without permitting these big things to undo them.

Mr. Morgan does not believe in retiring; altogether from business, as in many cases that have come under his observation retirement has been followed by the tortures of ennui and a speedy end. Mr. Hill a few years ago turned over many of his duties to his son, Louis, but he still retains enough offices to keep his mind from becoming rusty, yet not enough to prevent him from taking an enlightened part in the discussion and solution of large public problems, agricultural, economic, political and financial.

America's proud boast that she has no leisure class may hereafter be slightly modified, as our greatest men of affairs are beginning to realize that the making of money and the incessant fight for power are not the be-all and end-all of life.

He Didn't Propose.
The girl thought she would try a little strategy.
"Mr. Slowfellow," asked she, "don't you think two can live as cheaply as one?"
"Nothing to it," was the prompt reply. "My chum and I tried it once. Kapt bachelor's hall in a flat."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

So Helpful.
"Can't we instruct the poor about how to live properly and improve their general condition?"
"Why, certainly we can. Let us get up a series of lectures at one of the fashionable hotels."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Biliousness

"I have used your valuable Cascarets and I find them perfect. Couldn't do without them, I have used them for some time for indigestion and biliousness and am now completely cured. Recommend them to everyone. Once tried, you will never be without them in the family."—Edward A. Marx, Albany, N. Y.

Onomatopoeic.
One of the charms of music is that the musically uneducated person does not have to "understand" it. With "imitative" music, however, the case is quite different, and every passage has either an obvious or a thinly concealed meaning. Occasionally it is hard to decipher certain unusual noises, as the following story from Fliegende Blaetter indicates:

The composer had just played his last piece to his friend, the critic. "Very fine, indeed," said the critic. "But what is that passage which makes the cold chills run down the back?"
"Oh," returned the composer, "that is where the wanderer has the hotel bill brought to him."

A Useful Remedy.
Little Jamie, aged 3, was playing with his little friend, Jack. At the time Jamie chanced to have a rather heavy cold and was sneezing quite often. Jack's mother heard him several times and sympathetically asked: "Why, Jamie, what a cold you have! Doesn't your mother give you anything for it?" "Yes, ma'am," Jamie very respectfully answered, "she gives me a clean handkerchief," whereupon he produced the prescribed "remedy."—The Delineator.

Charley and His Mauds.
"You say your husband occasionally consults a palmist?"
"Yes," answered young Mrs. Torkins. "You see, Charley plays cards a great deal."
"But he isn't so superstitious as to think he can foretell his luck?"
"No. He takes it for granted that his luck will be bad. But he says it's worth the money to have somebody tell him he has a hand worth looking at."—Washington Star.

Something New.
"Yes, he is established in Washington now at the head of a flourishing arrangement bureau."
"What sort of a bureau?"
"Why, it's something entirely new. It takes charge of the cases of dismissed West Pointers and arranges for their reinstatement."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Some Satisfaction.
Safe in his mountain retreat, the train robber opened the bag of coin he had secured at the cost of so much trouble and danger.
It contained nothing but Lincoln pennies.
"Well," he said, as he took one of them between his thumb and finger and gazed at the rugged profile on the coin. "I never voted for 'im, an' I'm darned glad of it now!"

Consistent.
"Senator, may I ask what you really think of the new tariff?"
"As to that, young man, I must refer you to my record."
"But you haven't any record, Senator. You voted on both sides of the question."
"Then I should probably talk on both sides of it. Good morning."

Confidence of Genius.
"You say your dirigible balloon is a success?"
"Yes," answered the inventor.
"But it came down to the earth with a terrible bump."
"True. But it hit very close to the spot I was aiming at."

He Did.
"We are told," said the Sunday school teacher, "that we should love our neighbor. Now, who is your neighbor, Tommy?"
But Tommy Tucker merely blushed, hung his head, and said nothing. He didn't want to tell the little girl's name.—Chicago Tribune.

"Yes, I'm a block around the corner now," said Pleader. "A dentist has my old place."

"So?" ventured McMurf. "Then after this when we want our teeth pulled we'll have to go where we used to get our legs pulled."—New York Times.

A Real Consolation.

Little Molly's father can't quite see where Molly got her information. One day when her unmarried aunt was visiting at the house Molly became impressed with her aunt's solitary state. "Haven't you any husband, Aunt Molly?" she asked. Aunt Molly's pretended grief over the fact that she was husbandless was so real to Molly that she undertook the task of consolation. Never mind, dear Aunt Molly, husbands scold."—The Delineator.

Fitted for the Job.

The general consulted the topographical chart. "You understand colonel," he said, "that this charge of the enemy's fortification necessitates the most reckless disregard for human life?" "I understand, general," the colonel replied. "The forlorn hope that leads the movement will be composed exclusively of amateur chauffeurs."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Dangerous Odds.
Once when Lionel Brough gave his humorous entertainment at a northern lunatic asylum, he spent the hour he had to wait for his train in playing one of the inmates, a harmless old gentleman, a game of billiards.
