Rain and then some more rain. The downfall has been so steady for the past week that the streets are full of puddles of water and the small boys with their gum boots are happy.

To think that two weeks ago we were being told how to Dry Farm. And now this heavy rain. Well it is good to know how to do things even if you don't need to do them.

When you see a man with a happy look you can plainly know that he is through seeding.

Over in Central Oregon there is much activity in building new towns. In these the first things that are built are a Hotel, Newspaper, Bank and Push Club. Yet we have a few people here who are out of date and should have been born two hundred years ago who say that Ione would be better off without any of these. But then some people would kick if they were to come into a fortune for fear they would have to allow for administration.

THE KNELL OF THE WEED.

Long and crookedly have the experts of the Department of Agriculture been striving to find some means of eradicating the weed, other than by grubbing or pulling it up, and news comes from North Dakota that the fight has been won—at least over the wild mustard, the Canada thistle, the dandelion and many other similar pest abominations of people who till the ground for a living.

Spraying the territory affected with a solution of iron sulphate when the weeds are young does the work. The chemical, which is corrosive, attacks the tender tissue of the rapidly growing weeds and destroys them while there is little or no injury to the grain, particularly if it is a winter grain or was sown early in the spring and has gained considerable growth before the spraying—American Farmer.

"You're a queer looking thing to want to fight with me," said the young bulldog contentiously. "You're not in my class."
"Perhaps not," replied the porcupine quietly. "but I think I can give you a few points."—Philadelphia Press.

Customer (to watchmaker) — I told you that my watch lost half an hour every day, and now that you've repaired it it gains half an hour.
Watchmaker — Well, don't complain. It's only working to catch up lost time.
