Dam the Stream

"You take in a lot of money, young man," says Samuel Savelt; "but you spend it all. There is a constant stream of money passing thru your hands. If you would dam that stream you would soon get ahead. I'll tell you how to dam it. Simply run it into a good bank and check it out as needed. This will retard the flow." This bank sanctions the foregoing advice and invites you to deposit your whole income here and then check it out as required. That's one sure way of retarding the flow of the stream of expense. It costs you nothing to try it.

NO EYESORES IN THIS TOWN.

Even Winds Are Taken Into Account In Its Planning.

A very interesting experiment in the construction of a small garden city is offered by the industrial community of Torrance, Cal., says the Christian Herald. It has been the aim at Torrance to avoid everything which is ugly in plans, buildings or living conditions. The houses are extremely modest, being designed for working men and yet throughout an art effect has been obtained.

The town has been planned taking into consideration the prevailing winds, the contour of the land and the most direct route from home to factory. A broad avenue separates the residential from the industrial district. Every kind of business is classified and located accordingly. It has been found an excellent idea to lay all sewer, water and gas pipes in alleys and the lighting conduits back of the curb line, so that the streets need never be torn up. The churches, educational and civic buildings are grouped about a civic center. The streets are planned with a wealth of foliage. In the entire community there is not a single eyesore.

Give us an international mind to understand, an international heart to feel.—William D. B. Atney—

At the Door.
I thought myself indeed secure,
So fast the door, so firm the lock;
But, lo, he toddling comes to lure
My parent ear with timorous knock.

My heart were stone could I withstand
The sweetness of my baby's plea,
That timorous, baby knocking and,
"Please let me in; it's only me."

I threw aside the unfinished book
Regardless of its tempting charms,
And, opening wide the door, I took
My laughing darling in my arms.

Who knows but in eternity
I, like the truant child, shall wait,
The glories of a life to be,
Beyond the Heavenly Father's gate?

And will that Heavenly Father heed
The truant's supplicating cry
As at the outer door I plead,
"Tis I, O Father, only I?"

Bees and the Kilt.

In his book, "Forty-one Years in India," Lord Roberts tells the following amusing story:

"A curious incident happened at the Alambagh. I was employed inside the enclosure when all at once I heard a noise and commotion some little distance off. Getting on to the roof, I looked over the plain and saw our troops flying in every direction. There was no firing, no enemy in sight; but evidently something was wrong; so I mounted my horse and rode to the scene of confusion, where I found that the ignominious flight of our troops was caused by infuriated bees, which had been disturbed by an officer of the Ninth lancers thoughtlessly thrusting a lance into their nest. There were no serious consequences, but the highlanders were heard to remark on the unsuitability of their dress for an encounter with an enemy of that description."

A Tinker Inspired Wagner.

A tinker has established himself opposite our house and stunned my ears all day long with his incessant hammering. In my disgust at never being able to find a detached house protected from every kind of noise I was on the point of deciding to give up composing altogether until the time when this indispensable condition should be fulfilled. But it was precisely my rage over the tinker that, in a moment of agitation, gave me the theme for Siegfried's furious outburst against the bungling Mime. I played over the childishly quarrelsome Polter theme in G minor to my sister, furiously singing the words at the same time, which made us all laugh so much that I decided to make one more effort. This resulted in my writing down a good part of the first scene by the time Liszt arrived, Oct. 13 (1856).—Richard Wagner in His Autobiography.

How a Snake Sheds Its Skin.

The human skin is shed in such minute pieces that it ordinarily comes away unnoticed. But the skin of a snake comes away whole two or three times a year and is drawn off inside out from the head backward as the creature creeps through some bush, to which it is left attached. Before it is shed the skin loses its color, and the eyes become dim, because their outer skin is cast with the rest. The snake emerges very brightly colored from its old skin, and its markings are then most distinct.

Peculiar Musical Instrument.

A peculiar musical instrument is used by the Moros. It consists of a hoop of bamboo, upon which are hung by strings a number of thin pieces of mother-of-pearl. When struck with a small reed these give forth a sweet, tinkling sound, a combination of which sounds is developed into a weird, monotonous fantasy, very pleasant to the ear—for a short time.

Slightly Sarcastic.

"I am convinced that in many respects I resemble George Washington." "It seems unfair," replied Miss Oryman, "that an accident of chronology should have placed you at such a disadvantage. Merely because Washington was born first people say you resemble him instead of saying he resembles you. It really seems unfair."—Washington Star.

Dr. D. R. Haylor, eye specialist of Portland, Oregon, now permanently located and office with Haylor, the Jeweler of Heppner, Oregon, will be in Ione regular the first Saturday and Sunday of every month, commencing March 4. We do not depend on the old system of trial case alone or the unreliable questioning of the patient but instead by the use of the most modern and up to date electrical instruments which make it possible to examine the eye and see the existing condition. We are able to prescribe glasses for the different kinds of eye trouble astigmatism, spasm of accommodation and muscle trouble which result in headache and many other disturbances of the human system. With our permanent home and office in Heppner, Oregon, and a special built disk, we are able to give you reliable service at all times.
