

PROGRAM OF VARIED EVENTS AT IONE

Score one for Beach Haines. Men who have traveled much never miss a chance to eat at the Ione hotel.

Friday was a big day. The band started to play promptly at ten o'clock on the street and led the crowd to the park which was gaily trimmed for the occasion. The choir rendered several selections and the invocation was given by Rev. J. L. Jones. Bert Mason introduced the speaker of the day, Dr. Withycombe, whose speech we print as near as we remember it. Ladies and Gentlemen:

I am glad to be here with you today, this day which marks the greatest event but one in the world's history. With the exception of the birth of our Savior, Jesus Christ, no event is of such great importance. This flag represents liberty. Liberty that each one may enjoy. It was a desire for liberty that led the Pilgrims in 1620 to come to America. And in 1776 the Continental Congress issued that famous declaration proclaiming America free. That great struggle which followed is too well known to us all. Think of those tattered, half-clothed, patriots, whose barefoot tracks left the bloodstains in the snow. In those days we see Washington bending on his knees in the forest and praying to God for help. It was the desire for liberty that led men to these privations. With it all was the fear of God and today our citizenship is built upon Christianity.

This is a great country in many ways. Do you know that we control two-thirds of the banking capital of the world? Three-fourths of the corn of the world is raised here. Three-fourths of the railway mileage is credited to the United States. Yes, we are great in many things. I am going to get closer home. I know that the people of Ione are good, loyal American citizens. This celebration shows that. I want to talk about conditions right here. I have always tried to give the farmer my best advice. Some of you have differed with me, but I have always been frank with you and told you what I thought best. I should like to see you bore more wells. I believe we are coming to smaller farms. I think we need more intensive farming and less extensive agriculture. We have a better country here than we have been given credit for. We have to get away from wheat, however. We want to raise more cows, poultry, rye, hogs and alfalfa.

I have been glad to see so many automobiles. It shows that the people are more contented to live here. To make this their home. Automobiles bring the farm closer to the city and city advantages. It tends to keep the young people on the farm, certainly a worthy thing.

We have heard a great deal about back to the farm. The slogan is not, "Back to the farm," but it is "Stay on the farm." Every man should own his farm. I am not saying anything against the renter, we need the renter, but we need men and women to make the farm more than a transitory place of residence. We want a family on every 160 acres in this state. The wealth of this state lies in agriculture. One-fifth of the forests of the country are in Oregon, yet forests are being depleted and years are required to replace them. Agriculture is with us all of the time, let's look to the land.

Now to buy his farm the farmer must have cheap money. In Germany the farmers are able to get money very cheap, five and six per cent. Germany is one of the most prosperous of the countries of Europe, due mainly to the fact that the farmers own their farms. We are now working on a plan whereby the farmer can borrow to advantage, not disadvantage.

I expect to see the day when pumping stations will be in operation all along the Columbia and other rivers. There are five million horse power of idle energy going to waste in the rivers of this state and the time is coming when water will be pumped over these hills and they will blossom with roses.

But these things must be done by cooperation. The town must work with the farmer and the farmer with the town. This beautiful park, I don't know to whom it belongs, should be owned by the city. Rural credit, pumping stations, ownership of farms by farmers, all these and many more can be realized if we work together. These will bring us a new liberty, a freedom from drudgery, from hardships, and distress and open into a brighter, freer, and happier day.

After the speech, the band played America and the audience joined in the words. The morning program was over when the band played the Star Spangled Banner.

Friday afternoon the ball game was the main feature which Ione won. After the game the horse men took possession of the town and some exciting races were again pulled off in the main street. The dance was crowded that night and it was midnight before the crowd began to deminish.

Saturday morning Rev. Handsaker of Heppner made the principal speech in the park. The morning was cool and everyone enjoyed the services. About twelve o'clock the sun came out and by the time the ball game started it was sizzling hot. After the game the street races began. The running races were first held and then the footraces. Miss Josephine Knappenberg won the race for girls. Ed. Adkins was the champion fat man sprinter.

There was another big dance in the rink that evening and at ten-thirty the special train left for Heppner.

As usual, the baseball games were one of the main features of interest. Heppner and Ione were the contesting teams. The Thursday game was too one-sided to be of interest. Six innings passed before Ione managed to get a man to first base. Heppner piled up a lead of seven runs. Not an Ione man made a safe hit until the ninth inning when two clean ones were registered. Frank Hopkins made a nice two-bagger which was lost in the grass and allowed him to make the circuit with two other runners ahead of him. The game ended with the score 7 to 3 in favor of Heppner. Batteries were: Ione, Sperry, Johnson and Coshov; Heppner, Harlan and Hall. Heppner outhit Ione four to one.

The Friday game was the most exciting seen in Ione this season. The final score was 5 to 4 with the home guard on the long end. Heppner breezed along with a safe lead until the eighth inning when two scores came across as the result of poor headwork. This tied the game and Ione put across the winning run in the ninth when two flies were dropped. Heppner again outhit Ione, about three to one. The fielding of Sheldon, playing second base for Heppner, was easily the feature of this game. The batteries were: Ione, Johnson and Coshov; Heppner, Harlan and Hall.

The Saturday game started with a rush. Heppner scored their one and only run of the game in their time at bat. The first three Ione batters fell upon the offerings of Drake, who started the game in the box for Heppner, and when the smoke had cleared away each batter had registered a tally. These runs were sufficient to win the game, Heppner being within striking distance of home plate only a few times during the remainder of the session. After having pitched eighteen innings in two successive days, Harlan was called in from the field and went through the agony of nine more innings in the pitcher's box. The Ione batters managed to line out a half dozen clean bingles before his arm became sufficiently loosened for him to give a respectable exhibition, and coupled with a few errors the hits resulted in four more scores. The last half of the game, however, was a nip and tuck struggle with neither side able to increase their score. Much credit must be given to Bob Sperry for the excellent game he pitched for Ione. He kept the hits well scattered, and was strong in the pinches. Batteries for the third game were: Ione, Sperry and Coshov; Heppner, Drake, Harlan and Hall.

The stickwork of Bill Flske, the young high school lad, who is playing his first season in fast company was one of the real features of the series. In the first game he made four hits out of five times at bat and drove in a majority of Heppner's scores. The catching, batting, base-running and all around playing of Bill Hall, the Hood River backstop who did the receiving for Heppner was another feature that kept up interest during the series.

The officers put their men in a taxicab at once but it was surrounded by such a mass of humanity that it could hardly proceed. All the way to the court house, the mob raced alongside and the doors of the sheriff's office had to be locked to keep out the throng.

Neither of the youthful robbers appeared in the least excited but laughed and joked about the crowd they had drawn. As they were placed in the jail, they turned and thanked the officers for the courtesy with which they had been treated. Throughout the trip neither had been handcuffed.

Sheriff Taylor and Chief Agent Wood express their implicit confidence in the stories told by the young fellows to the effect that they had never before been implicated in any crime and were only influenced to take a hand in the robbery by Manning.

Mr. T. J. Sinnott, who came up to Heppner over Sunday, left for Lexington on Monday.

There were three stands and they kept the crowd supplied with ice cream and pop. We almost forgot to mention the nigger baby stand. It was estimated that the negro population in the United States would be a minus quantity if they had stood there in
