HEPPNER HERALD

Luther said that music was the gift of the Gods, meaning that the Gods were the only individuals who could appreciate music. The editors over in Pendleton should therefore take hope because

The Popular Tastes And How They Differ we noted some time back in their worthy publication a few articles dealing with the lack of appreciation which the people of that city displayed during their recent chautauqua, when some of the best talent in the country appeared on the program. However, in Heppner we are closer kin to the divine beings, at least we infer this since we talked to Mayor Smead, yesterday Mr. Smead just returned from Portland where he signed up some talent for the Fair. One man said, "We had the most appreciative crowds at Heppner that we had in the whole season." Another said, "I'm coming to Heppner this year if I have to buy space on the street." He isn't going to show on the street because he is coming for $50 less than he came for last year.

The Portland Ad. Club Quartette and Parson's band say that they always like to come to Heppner, and like our late friend Post was in the habit of saying, there's a reason. The reason is simply this, the people appreciate something really worth while. One reason why we get the best which the artists are capable of giving is because we are appreciative. It's a trite saying that there must be a favorable atmosphere before anyone can do their best and the audience creates the "atmosphere" that we refer to. The Round-Up seems to be more adapted to the aesthetic tastes of the people of Pendleton than is grand opera. Probably Pendleton will be ready for Chautauquas later on, who knows?

Wheat will soon be a dollar a bushel in Heppner. This is what the most conservative men say. It is now selling for more than ninety cents a bushel and has been going up from one to two cents daily. The present status of the war shows that the struggle will last much longer than was anticipated and each day's fighting boosts the price. With Japan now engaged food prices will take another advance, and with every additional nation drawn into the war, we can expect food stuffs to go up. Wheat, being the prime requisite, can not remain less than a dollar a bushel long and how much above that price, only the length of the war can determine.

When you can't get the Herald office over the phone, remember our number is 13. Somebody had to have it and there's nothing like making a virtue out of necessity, as the prophet of old was in the habit of remarking.

The fair will soon be here and it behooves us to clean up. Nys, the lawyer, Pearson, the tailor, and let us not overlook the Jackrabbit Garage, have washed their windows and cleaned up generally. Vic Groshens has mowed his lawn and

The Matter of Keeping Clean. any person strolling up May Street will note the improved appearance of the property. Down in the north end of town the woodpiles in the streets have been vanishing and there will not be a woodpile in the city streets by fair time, certainly a desirable thing. Pruitt Cox, D. E. Gillman and the editors have agreed to keep their "348's" off the street during the fair and we here praise ourselves for desiring to see the city appear at her best at that time. Herb Fant will be allowed to appear on the streets with his car, since it has just been painted. Let's clean up, and if you happen to find anyone who does not have anything to clean up—tell them to clean themselves up, that's worth something.

The French soldiers besides taking a few shots at the Germans and Austrians figuratively take a few at them in a daily paper which they print and issue to every man daily. This is an innovation in army circles and is greatly liked by the men. The public however, does not get these, they being published strictly in the interests of the army.

Corporations were born in 1785, the year that Watt invented the steam engine. Steam power ushered in the factory system of production and the corporation at once came to the fore as the most efficient type of organization by which production was directed. It was an advance over partnerships because it was a perpetual organization. Their rapid growth and tremendous influence which they soon gained caused many to believe that they would soon overawe the government itself, and in several instances in late years they successfully withstood all attempts of the government towards regulation of any nature.

Why We Need To Supervise Corporations. At the present time they are occupying their proper position in relation to the government. This is shown by their actions in the last few days. When the war started the prices of auto tires, sugar and several other trust products were advanced without notice and without satisfactory cause. When the Department of Justice was ordered to investigate the advance of prices, auto tires at once assumed their former level and the sugar situation was found to be in its normal condition.

A few years ago this practice was considered one of the legitimate practices in business but with the passing of many industries into a few hands, corresponding control into the hands of the government has been the only safeguard that the people possess. While great credit is due the large concerns for standardizing the product, economy in production, bettering the article, and manifold other advantages, this supervision by the government is needed.

The local moving picture house will soon be showing pictures of the war. If the moving pictures keep up the good work, only the foolish and otherwise defective will go abroad to see what can be seen with less tear on the system at home.

The lace industry is about to be destroyed according to dispatches received here. This would be a terrible blow to civilization. Just imagine what we would do without lace. It's too horrible to think about. Several running records are reported to have been broken in France lately. These include the 100, 220 and 440 yard dashes and many of the long distance records. One German broke the high-dive record when a Frenchman pushed him into the Rhine. Aerial gymnastics are now regular pastimes with the soldiers, affording great amusement. Target practice has been in vogue for many days, many good shots being made. Many accounts similar to our "Night Rider" boys' pranks have sifted through the communications. Many other novel happenings have occurred in various parts of Europe and several are reported from China. Nothing of much importance is worth mentioning as happening in Mexico, except that Villa has purchased a Vietrola.

Novel Happenings All over the World The National and American Leagues say that the war has injured their business. To some people that refers to the European war but to a great many others it refers to the activities of the Federal League President Gilmore of the new league made a reply once used by J. P. Jones, late of the American navy, "We haven't started to fight yet," evidently assuming that they referred to the Federal League.

"Get a premium" is the new slogan of the fair. Every home in the county should be able to display their trophies to the visitor when he enters. Collecting ribbons and premiums is an easy matter, if you don't think so, ask Oscar Minor or Doug. Gurdane, not to overlook Ben Swaggert, mule raiser superbus.

Mobilization of all fair products has been ordered and the command has been received in all parts of the county. New recruits are wanted to fill the places of the "Old Guard" who displayed such courage in the work last year.

Mrs. Claud Coats made this office a pleasant call on Wednesday. She was interested in the many labor-saving machines which we have, including the linotype. Mrs. Coats said that she left Claud at home to take care of the place. Mrs. Coats said that they had finished threshing and prices looked high enough to warrant her in paying for the semi-weekly.
