There has been considerable speculation as to how England's possessions would stand by her in the advent of war. These are being satisfied now for the solidarity of the Empire seems to be stronger than ever. Probably it takes some great public calamity of this nature to make them realize that they are the sons of England in whatever province they may live. Different Canadian provinces have donated food stuffs, from thirty to fifty thousand men are in arms and a part of them on the way to the continent. From India troops are on the way and ships and men from Australia have captured many islands in the Pacific. Should conditions arise which called for further and larger aid from the colonies, such would be forthcoming.

The first thing that a child should be taught to do is to take care of his person. No person can expect to do good, efficient work who fails to keep his person clean, especially those who do not clean their teeth. Of all places the mouth should be kept in sanitary condition. There are a vast number of diseases that spring from an unhealthy mouth.

The Care of Your Teeth. Pyorrhea is a disease which comes from an uncleanly condition of the mouth, it follows up the teeth and attacks the alveolar processes and is the main cause for old people losing their teeth. The care of teeth is receiving attention in every walk of life. Experiments conducted last year in Cleveland and Indianapolis with deficient pupils in the schools showed that most of them were negligent with their teeth and after "toothbrush drills" were inaugurated, these pupils took their rank with the rest of the students.

Just before school opens every scholar should have his teeth examined, eyes also, and should be encouraged to practice regularly and industriously with a toothbrush. The matter of keeping well is so easy that most of us have overlooked it. Cleaning your teeth is a habit and one which spells freedom from tooth trouble, good digestion and long life. The brush, my boy, the brush.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has taken off several of their trans-continental trains and have sent the men back to England to fight on full pay. It also suggested to its 80,000 employees that they set aside one day's pay and donate it to the English war fund.

A Corporation's Share In the Cost of The War. English war fund. Such a contribution would amount to considerable. Thus does the big corporation come in for its share of the terrible cost of war. It might be remembered that during the Civil War, when the attention of the people was distracted, the railroads of this country accumulated much of the vast wealth they now possess. But in this case the railroad is sharing in the general cost of the struggle and not taking advantage of the times. Surely a commendable stand and one which will stand them in good stead in the days that are to come.

Andy Rood says that when he sells his wheat and gets his wife he will build a house in town. He couldn't go wrong in building a few for rent.

The Czar of Russia has changed the name of St. Petersburg. It looks like there will be several other changes of this nature before the treaty of peace is signed.

It didn't take the English and Irish long to forget their preevences when Germany stepped in.

Any person who has examined the register in the Palace lately will see such signatures as, John Smith, The Roundup City, Henry Jones, 1915 and J. T. Knapps, The Egg City. The idea is no new one as far as we can learn, anyone can use it. Every city of importance in the United States and also Kansas has adopted some slogan for their city.

A Suggestion. It is an inexpensive method of advertising your home town, it shows that you think well of it, all of which is a silent tribute to yourself. We suggest that the Commercial Club adopt some slogan for Heppner. Something short, suggestive and true of the town. Something like, John Smith, Happy Homes, or anything which will bring the town before the public in this easy, excellent and extensive way.

England has announced that her troops from India are on the way to the Continental wars. These comprise mostly of native Indian troops and will be their first introduction to the Western world.

How India Will Benefit By War. Aside from all other aspects of the question, it will be a wonderful treat to the Indians. Here they will mingle with the best races of the world and the effects will be far-reaching for good. They will carry back with them new ideas, new habits, ways of living and modes of thinking and we prophesy that their missionary message to their countrymen will be productive of good that would otherwise have taken generations to accomplish.

Napoleon called his privates "cannon fodder." This aptly expresses the average military man's idea of the men who carry the rifles. Their business is to deal with the destruction of human lives.

A Military Man's Views Of War. When a fort is to be captured the number of guns defending it is learned, how fast these can be worked and how many men will be killed is calculated and then twice that number is dispatched against it. The one-half which can not be massacred capture the fort. The others are the cannon fodder. This is not a glorious view of war but is the practical, logical and true side to consider.

Germany has issued a decree stating that any son of the Fatherland who does not return to the colors at the present time will be deprived of his right to inherit property which he might fall heir to in the future. However in America they can become heirs to an opportunity to make a fortune for themselves, which is always better than a fortune inherited. And what good is a fortune, large or small, after a man is shot full of holes and laid away in the earth with no more burial ceremonies than are given to a horse? We don't advise staying away from the Fatherland in her time of need, the man should satisfy his own conscience, but as a matter of inheritance, we would advise the foreigner to stay in the country where he can make his own living and even accumulate a modest fortune, especially if he is a foreigner and has the average industry of the average foreigner.

Inheritances of Different Kinds. America they can become heirs to an opportunity to make a fortune for themselves, which is always better than a fortune inherited. And what good is a fortune, large or small, after a man is shot full of holes and laid away in the earth with no more burial ceremonies than are given to a horse? The Allies might well use J. P. Jones oft-quoted remark, "We haven't started to fight yet."

The "Sick Man of Europe" is beginning to show signs of life.

"Go to Church" has been changed to "Go to War."
