PLANNING AND HEALTH.

No community can afford, viewed from an economic basis, to grow in such wise as to increase the hazard of sickness to its people. Every dollar spent for public improvements or permitted to be spent for private gain should have a life producing result. It is almost inconceivable that any citizen or group of citizens would sanction plans or projects that, if carried out to their full extent, would prove detrimental to public health or welfare. Certainly none such would with knowledge aforesaid give their approval to lines of community activity that can have only the ultimate effect of undermining public health and morals either through restriction placed upon these natural aids for the promotion of health or through the development of such conditions as will perpetuate or spread disease. Please notice that I state none would with malice aforesaid so blight his community. But many do, without this unsocial spirit, project plans that have the above effect, and their action receives public sanction because we see results only in terms of their immediate consequences. The insidious influence which may come from an inanimate mass through a long process of slow development does not impress us while it is in the process of coming. Looking back over its period of growth, we can gauge it, or, contrasting the state of social well being produced by it with that produced by a more constructive plan elsewhere, we can estimate its cost. As communities, however, we seldom attain a conception of this cost. Only when the social engineer reveals the ugly handicaps thus imposed upon the city is there any realizing sense of the value of the one and the loss of the other.—Bernard J. Newman.

Old Soldiers Admire Booth.

Grant Dimick, manager of R. A. Booth, Republican nominee for United States Senator, has received the following communication:

Newberg, Sept. 24, 1914.

I am one of many members of Shiloh Post No. 77, G. A. R., who received a letter commending Hon. George Chamberlain as a friend of old soldiers. Have heard a number of the boys express themselves in regard to the letter as a huge joke. It will be some time before old soldiers look to Mississippi Democrats as special friends.

To me the letter is a source of both pleasure and indignation; pleasure that it is an assurance they feel the need of every vote they can possibly get; indignation that I should be regarded as so devoid of sense as to be caught by such trash.

There are about 50 members of Shiloh Post and I know of but one Chamberlain man among them. There may be two or three others, but I do not know them.

As regards myself there can be no better man for Senator than Mr. Booth. I have known him for over 20 years with increasing respect and admiration for him.

N. E. BRITT, Past Post Commander of Shiloh Post No. 77, Department of Oregon, G. A. R.

Students Grateful to Booth.

Student loan funds, established to assist needy students through college, have long had the attention of R. A. Booth, Republican candidate for Senator. Having had a hard struggle to earn his own education, Booth has endeavored to make the path a little more smooth for young men and women who are in the same position.
