CHAMBERLAIN NOT PRIMARY FRIEND

C. E. S. Wood Reviews Senator's Record--Recalls Refusal to Help Bryan.

With a long memory, Colonel C. E. S. Wood has been telling the voters in Portland the history of George E. Chamberlain regarding popular laws and issues. Colonel Wood has been unsparing of Chamberlain's political record and night after night he has been declaring Chamberlain a double-dealer, who wants to agree with people on both sides of every question and who holds no opinion other than that of perpetuating Chamberlain in office.

In 1903, Wood and T. T. Geer were candidates for the popular vote for United States Senator. In that campaign Wood says he wanted to make an active fight, but that Chamberlain, fearing Wood might jeopardize Chamberlain's chances for election as Governor, insisted that Wood remain quiet. As Geer received the popular vote, Wood wrote the Democratic members of the Legislature asking them to support Geer for Senator. When these Democrats asked Chamberlain for advice he told them to leave the Republicans fight it out without Democratic help. This attitude on the part of Chamberlain, as says Colonel Wood, was in direct conflict with the spirit and principle of the primary.

Again, says Colonel Wood, Chamberlain himself wrote to A. D. Stillman, of Umatilla, recommending that the Democrats hold an assembly to make nominations. Later when the Republicans held an assembly they were assailed by the Chamberlain newspapers and charged with trying to undermine the direct primary and return to machine methods.

In his campaigns for Governor Chamberlain, says Wood, argued that the Legislature and Governor should be of opposite political parties. Chamberlain now argues that Congress should be of the same political complexion as the President.

When nominated for Senator as a Democrat in 1908, Chamberlain posed as a non-partisan, declares Colonel Wood, knowing that only with Republican votes he could be elected. At that time Roosevelt was immensely popular in Oregon and Chamberlain announced that he was a Roosevelt Democrat. In December, 1908, Roosevelt met Chamberlain in the East and greeted him as Senator-to-be. When Roosevelt bolted the Republican ticket and much of his popularity waned, Chamberlain attacked Roosevelt, although the latter, when President, had gone as far as he could to bring about Chamberlain's election by a Republican Legislature.

In the campaign of 1908, continues Colonel Wood, Chamberlain refused to attend the Bryan rally in Portland and again absented himself from Portland when Judge Alton B. Parker came to speak for Bryan. Chamberlain was afraid that his plea of non-partisanship would not hold good if he was present at these Democratic rallies for Bryan.

Colonel Wood has stigmatized Chamberlain as selfish, as a man whose sole desire is to look after himself. He calls attention to the Chamberlain cards displayed in this campaign wherein there is no hint of any party designation.

Somewhat similar talks are being made by T. T. Geer, ex-Governor, who is also reviewing the political changes which Chamberlain has assumed in his office-seeking career. Colonel Wood is interested in defeating Chamberlain because Wood does not consider Chamberlain a Democrat. Geer says Chamberlain is not a Republican but is "a man of pretense."

AGASSIZ AND A HERRING.

And a Student Who Finally Succeeded in Making a Discovery.

A student enrolled in Agassiz's class. For several days Agassiz paid no attention to him whatever. At length, tired of standing around idle, the student asked Agassiz to give him something to do. Agassiz's reply was to hand him a herring and to say, "Study this." The student was bewildered, but set about "studying" it. The next day Agassiz asked him what he had learned about the herring. The student replied that it had two eyes, so many fins and such and such markings.

"No, no!" Agassiz cried. "Study it more. Those things are not important." The next day and the next the experience was repeated. The fourth day Agassiz again demanded information about the now rotting specimen. In a desperate attempt at humor the student replied, "Well, it's the same on both sides."

"That's it!" shouted Agassiz. "That's it! A starfish isn't the same on both sides, an oyster isn't, thousands of specimens of the sea are not. When you find one that is, you've found a starting point in a new stage in the evolution of life."

Obviously, that student learned more from that one lesson about the scientific method of study than he would have learned in a year's reading and lectures. The textbooks would have taught him the facts; Agassiz taught him the method of learning all facts—World's Work.

Wakening.

"So you think there is yet a chance of selling Mr. Nuskals an oyster?" "Sure! He used to say he wanted to buy one; now he's arguing he can't afford it."—Puck.
