SCHOOL NOTES

By Supt. S. E. Notson.

The following clipping from "School News" published in Illinois, is applicable in this state also:

WINTER APPROACHES.

In the Northern States, a few days more will bring the storms and frosts of winter. The winter season is one of the best for study. The confinement within doors is not so irksome. The work upon the farms is not so exacting. It is a time, especially in the rural communities, in which the intellectual development of the entire neighborhood may be forwarded. The conditions for good school work should be provided for teachers and pupils. If the schoolhouse and premises have been properly looked after before the opening of school, there is little that will require the attention of the board. However, it frequently happens that not all things are made ready for the opening of school. Sometimes broken windows are not repaired. In many instances the foundations of the buildings need repairing before the ground freezes. If this is not attended to in time, there is danger of cold floors, with the attendant risk of colds, sore throats, and kindred ailments. The heating plant may not have been put in first-class condition. The fuel supply may not be sufficient for the winter. The provisions for ventilation may not be in working order. The thermometer may have been broken during the more pleasant weather. No provisions may have been made for the introduction of moisture into the atmosphere of the schoolroom, a matter of importance when the room must be heated. And there may be other things which have been overlooked.

If any of these matters require attention in order to make the schoolroom pleasant, comfortable and sanitary, they should be attended to at once. If any pupils ride or drive to school, the sheds or stables for the horses should be in good repair. These matters should receive the prompt attention of the school board.
