CONSCRIPTION

Congress passed the conscription bill last Saturday night by a heavy vote thus adopting the selective draft plan of recruiting the army.

While the sentiment of the country has been strongly against conscription until recently, there has no doubt been a considerable change in public opinion on the question since the declaration of war and the action of congress will be much more favorably received by the country than it would have been a month or so ago.

A provision of the new law that will meet with popular approval is that which fixes the minimum age at 21 years. This will stop the enlistment of immature school boys, who are too young to stand up under the rigors of active campaigning, and places the burden of national defense upon those who are nearer the physical and mental prime of life.

Another feature of conscription that is to be commended is that all classes will be called upon to bear an equal share of the burden, the rich and powerful as well as the poor and humble.

In the light of present day intelligence war is an unspeakable horror and any attempt to glorify it is coming to be looked upon as a relic of past barbaric thinking. It is with us, however, and the only thing to do is to meet the conditions it imposes with the same fortitude that we would meet the midnight prowler or would-be assassin.

Conscription, however, must not stop with the drafting of men. Money, as represented by excess profits and unearned incomes must be drafted into the public service and every material resource of the country must be required to do its bit. Profits and incomes are no more sacred than are the young men of America.

HEPPNER NEEDS A BAND

The Herald had occasion several weeks ago to make the above remark and as it has not noticed any strains of patriotic music being wafted about by the April zephyrs as a result of its initial effort it confidently goes to bat again with the further elucidation that Heppner Needs a Band.

A county seat town of the size and commercial importance of Heppner is not living up to its best ideals if it has no band. There are so many times when a band is needed in a town like Heppner that it is idle to enumerate them. There are not only times when a band is needed but there are times when a band must be had regardless of expense and then good Heppner money has to be sent out to Portland or some other town that has bands to pay for what we should have of our own.

A town cannot have a band without paying for it whether it depends on the home grown or the imported article; in this particular a band is very much like a sack of potatoes or a roll of butter. If you use the home grown article you keep your money at home; if you use the imported product you send your money away to help keep up some other town that is wise enough to have bands to hire out. The Herald is well satisfied that there is plenty of high grade raw material in this town to make a fine band from and it has been reliably informed that a competent instructor and leader resides here. So why in the world should the town longer try to worry along without a band.

If the commercial club or the city council or the ministerial association or some other live organization doesn't get busy pretty soon and stir up a band the Herald will call upon the ladies of the town to supply the long felt want; and it may be depended upon that when the ladies get busy on the band question there will be "Music in the Air."

NEWSPAPERS

What a barren place a city would be without the newspaper. If it were not for the existence of the press in a community there would be very little life in any circle of human activity. The papers are public institutions in a broad sense. They mould public sentiment. They encourage business. They bring the interests of a town together. They make known advantages which attract families and business enterprises. Yet the average business man is unwilling to assist in the support of these factors by that advertising which every progressive man knows pays. If the two papers of this city were to go out of business and no other were to take their places, the chances are that three-fourths of the business men of the city would soon be compelled to close their affairs and go elsewhere. The papers do not ask charity. They do ask, and have a right to ask, advertising patronage from every business house in the city.—Pendleton Tribune.

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas it has pleased our heavenly Father to call to his heavenly home Brother John W. Rasmus, who was always a faithful member of Heppner Lodge, No. 69, A.F.A.M. and beloved by all its members for his many noble qualities,

Resolved: That in the loss of Brother Rasmus Heppner Lodge has lost one of its most esteemed members, and while we bow in humble submission to the will of the Omnipotent, we deeply deplore the loss we have sustained.

To the bereaved wife and family we extend our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in their sad bereavement and hope that their deep sorrow may be relieved by a trusting faith in God. And be it further

Resolved: That we draper our charter in mourning in memory of our departed brother, that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the lodge, a copy sent to the family of our departed brother and copies be sent to the Heppner papers for publication.

Signed Frank Gilliam,
John Har,
H. Cohn.
