

Mrs. W. E. White, Monument, linen.

The articles enumerated below were included in the shipment of Nov. 18 but were not paid for out of the above amount. Under the direction of Mrs. R. J. Vaughan:

Gauze compressors, 9-in. square
-----18 doz.
Gauze compressors, 9-in. square
(by lone ladies) -----27 1/2 doz.
Muslin bandages, 4-inch-----11 doz.
Muslin bandages, 3-inch-----6 doz.

In justice to the committee who worked under me, and the ladies of the county who served early and late, I wish to state that there was no truth to the report that the work of the Chapter had been criticized as being incorrectly done. There are ways of showing disloyalty to the flag besides upholding the Kaiser.

MRS. BINNS,

Chairman of Supply Committee.

WILLOW CREEK DISTRICT

To gather, to gather material wealth and free one's self from the burden of looking after the every day's necessities and to realize the oft repeated statement, "to be independent is an accomplishment," but to gather about you friends who see not your material wealth, but the real man that is in you is a greater accomplishment. This might be said of the McCulloch brothers who for the past twenty years have built up and maintained one of the best stock ranches in Morrow county, and at the same time won the good will of all of those whom they came in contact with. In appreciation of this fact, on the night before their departure from the old home place, neighbors gathered in and expressed their gratitude in words and in song. The evening was well spent, after the usual friendly greetings and old time stories told, music was secured and every foot lost its backwardness and stiffness and soon were gliding to the rhythmic chords of music. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Norman Florence, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. A. Florence, Mr. and Mrs. Kirkland and family, Mr. and Mrs. Watkins, Walter Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Floreon, Mr. Coonson, Mr. and Mrs. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Simpkin, Jake Dexter and E. S. Payne.

Of course we have to be brief, but we wish all the business men, all the editors and writers, all the teachers and preachers, all the court house people, all the laborers and mechanics of Heppner would each morning take a brief ride (say seven miles) before breakfast up the Willow Creek way and be sure and bring their D's and H's with them, and then go home and discuss the merits and demerits of the Willow Creek road, noting of course its smoothness, its wideness, its evenness and its freeness from all rocks and bumps,—a good subject.

Norman Florence is now hauling his wheat to town.

Eugene Molitor, well known citizen of Pendleton and Grand Knight of the Knights of Columbus council of that city, was a visitor in Heppner last Sunday attending the Hibernian initiation and banquet. Mr. Molitor has visited Heppner frequently in the past and he confesses to a fondness for the town and its people. "I like Heppner better every time I come here," was way he expressed it to a Herald reporter Sunday evening.
