HEPPNER IS GETTING IN LINE

That Heppner is getting in line to take her place among the most progressive cities of Oregon is evidenced by the fact that a delegation of live wires and leading citizens are to leave for Portland this evening to take part in the organization of a state wide Chamber of Commerce.

That these men are fully alive to the paramount need of this section of eastern Oregon is shown by the fact that in outlining a development program for Oregon, the adoption of which they will urge at the Portland meeting, they have given irrigation first place, with the John Day project, no doubt, uppermost in their minds.

That the gentlemen composing Heppner's delegation are alive to the truth of the old proverb, "In union there is strength," is made clear by their announced intention of co-operation with the delegates of Umatilla and Gilliam counties in outlining and carrying forward development work in which the three counties have a common interest.

This sort of spirit is all that is needed to make Heppner one of the very best little cities in the northwest because if the spirit of progress is present in a community it is bound to find expression and realization in action and results.

Too many Oregon cities are dominated by the "Portland spirit," as described by J. A. Currey, a prominent business man of that city the other day when in a public address he pointed out a few of Portland's civic shortcomings.

While, of course, Heppner is not in Portland's class in the matter of kicking about things we should remedy ourselves it is an open secret that a little more of the Seattle—or Pendleton—spirit wouldn't hurt us a bit, and a few of Mr. Currey's observations are worth reprinting for the consideration of all Heppner citizens. Here they are:

"This city is always yelling that Seattle gets everything. The reason Seattle does get things is because she is always on the job. We could get things also if we would only go after them in the right way. Protests based on the grounds that the government is favoring some other locality are given little consideration in Washington.

"The city that goes after things is the city that gets them, but we cannot expect our congressmen and senators to go after all these things; but they can help and will help. They have something else to do than to run around to the different departments every time some civic body passes resolutions. The best and most recent illustration of how you can get things in Washington if you know how is the way approval was given to the Warm Springs project. It would never have been approved had the usual flood of protests from Oregon gone in, but the people who were handling it were wise to the methods, they knew their subject, knew what they wanted and where to get it, knew the benefit it would be, and they just loaded Congressman Sinnott to the neck with facts and then backed him up when he appeared before the capital issues committee. Mr. Sinnott was so well equipped that he won the committee, and I want to say right here that while I have never met Mr. Sinnott and would not know him if I would meet him, I did find out in Washington that he was the man and the one man whose ability pulled over the Warm Springs project, the press agents of other politicians to the contrary.

"Let me urge that if Washington does something that just doesn't suit you, don't go off and file a protest, but look at yourself to learn the cause of your own disappointment. Astoria has a fine reputation in Washington departments. Little Astoria is not yelling because she does not get shipping or coaling boats, but in Washington she is known as the town that is doing things, for in Washington it is known that Astoria has already completed its grain elevators, is now going ahead with a big dry dock, increasing its wharfage and a lot of other things. Now when Astoria does get shipping don't yell that she has been favored, for she has not, for the only favor she has is the favor she has done herself by going ahead.

"The fact that Seattle and the whole state of Washington have taken up plans for reconstruction work are known in Washington and here we have started nothing. The fact that Seattle started out right at the close of the war and with backing from Tacoma and Spokane, has already well under way the plan to sell $100,000,000 worth of state bonds to put to use idle state land, build roads, establish irrigation projects and develop water power, has stamped Seattle not only in Washington, but throughout the east as the 'go get 'em kid,' and that is the thing that is going to count in this after-the-war business.

"The best lesson the west coast learned from the war was how to sell bonds, and Seattle is taking advantage of that lesson. Now if the government comes along and matches Seattle's $100,000,000 for reconstruction work, do not yell and send a protest off to Washington, but just pinch yourself and remember that Portland and Oregon have been lagging behind the reconstruction work wagon. Seattle may not know what she is going to do with the $100,000,000, and she has some wild dreams, but she is going to have it, so when there is something to do she will be ready and you will find that Uncle Sammy will be with her."

JUST BEFORE CHRISTMAS

Ma's awful nice to bab' now
But wait till Christmas's past
Da'mur's now beneath
his breath—
It's sure too good to last!

MOST RADIANT OF ALL DAYS

There Are None Whose Light Has Ever Shone So Far as the Light of Christmas.

Of all the radiant days of the year there are none whose light has ever shone so far as the light of Christmas. For nearly two thousand years it has shone with a light that could never be quenched, and it shines today, serene and fair and steadfast, even though it may be dimmed by the darkening clouds of man-made human conflict, says an exchange.

For a thousand years before the Christian era the Hebrews were looking forward to the light of Christmas. They saw the golden age before them when the Christ should come, and their expectation of a Messiah lighted up the manger at Bethlehem. And then he came; and since then the whole world has been looking both backward and forward to the light of Christmas.

Other days we have that are dear to the human heart, but Christmas is a little dearer than all other days to the heart of grown-up men and women, and infinitely dearer to the hearts of the children. The light of Christmas shines for them all the year round. They hark back to the joys of the Christmas that is past, and they are always looking forward to the light of the Christmas that is to come.

Christmas is the day of days to all humanity, but it belongs essentially to the children. You remember that Christ took a little child and set him in the midst of his disciples, saying: "Of such is the kingdom of Heaven." And that was because a child is so rich in faith and hope and expectations. And because of this faith and hope and expectation the children are always looking forward to Christmas, seeing its light, and anticipating its joys. And so, whatever else we do, let us make the children happy on Christmas. Let us help them to understand the meaning and the spirit of this day of loving and giving, and as far as in us lies, let us all become as little children on Christmas day, remembering that he who gave us the Christmas, himself had the heart of a little child.

Rise, holy morn! Rise, holy morn!
Draw forth the cheerful day from night.
O Father, touch the east and light
The light that shone when hope was born!
—Tennyson.

Maybe—And Maybe Not

The maid was very fair to see,
But staid, and not inclined to folly.
She stood behind the Christmas tree
And gravely hung a wreath of holly.
Himself, passed there, by chance, and saw
Her all alone, and straightway lingered;
And she, who had been tranquil—pshaw!
Began at once to chatter and blather.
The mistletoe hung overhead,
I think I said the maid was fair;
Her eyes were bright, her lips were red,
And sometimes glistened in her hair.
The tree was large, the two were hid—
He turned and left her—Yes.

The maid was very wroth. Oh, dear,
She ran away with cheeks a-flaming
'Twas anger and a touch of fear,
The mistletoe the holly standing.
She told her dearest friend, I've heard,
So, shortly, everybody knew it;
The place where the deed occurred
Was near, and maidens flocked to view it.
Himself was there, engulfed in gloom,
(And he was also good to see.)
With haunted face those maids to see;
And so they each one ran and hid,
And wailed to tarry—Yes.

Letting the Neighbors See It.
"Mr. Giltney gave Mrs. Giltney a pearl necklace for a Christmas present," remarked Mr. Twiddle.
"I've heard about it," answered Mrs. Twiddle. "And if it wasn't for the risk, I dare say she'd hang it in a front window of their apartment instead of a holly wreath."

Merely a Poet.
"These pretty girls who stand beneath the mistletoe pretend they don't know where they are."
"Tough!" replied the heartless cynic.
"They'd know in a jiffy if some fellow came along with a harem."
