RUTH'S DRESS

By JOSEPHINE MURPHY.

Ruth was making her wedding dress; a dainty gown of fine sheer white or gaudy and cobweb lace, just such a dress as she had dreamed of having ever since the day Alan White had put a little ring with three blue turquoises on her slender brown finger. The dress stood for a great deal of extra economy, and a lot of self-sacrifice on the part of her father and mother.

Ruth's heart beat with joy as she hemmed the little ruffles. Mrs. Mills, passing by, stopped and touched the dress gently. "Isn't it pretty?" she said, wistfully. "I'm real glad we made out to manage it. Your father thought at first that it was foolish to spend money on a white dress when you needed so many other things. But I insisted. I remembered when I was married I wanted a white dress, too, but they all said it was such foolishness that I gave up the idea and was married in my brown silk. But as I have ever since wanted one I was determined you should have yours."

"Dear me! There's Miss Helen coming across the field!" Irene, who had entered a few minutes before, ran and opened the door for her, while Ruth hurriedly gathered up her ruffles. "Mother, help me get these out of sight. Miss Helen mustn't see this dress. She's such an old gossip."

Although the dress and ruffles were neatly tucked away before Helen came in, her sharp eyes did not fail to notice a piece of lace on the carpet and a white thread clinging to Ruth's skirt. She had a feeling something unusual was taking place, but said nothing about it, although she prolonged her visit, and talked until Ruth almost lost her patience.

So Helen went home without having been taken into Ruth's confidence. Neither Miss Helen nor anyone else in Westwood was destined to see that dress of Ruth's.

On the day that it was finished, Ruth's heart beat fast with joy, as she laid it carefully on the bed in her room.

Irene, who was inclined to be absent-minded, entered the room shortly after to curl her hair. She lit the lamp, gave a little "pouf" at the match and tossed it carelessly away. In another minute Ruth's dress lay a heap of charred rags.

When Ruth came in and beheld the remains of the gown she had made with such pride and delight a flood of tears streamed down her pale cheeks. She would now have to wear her dark blue silk, and it wouldn't seem like a wedding at all!

After tea Mrs. Mills went over to Miss Helen and poured out the dismal story. This young lady listened intently, and for once was not forward with comment.

After Mrs. Mills had left to go up-town Miss Helen threw a shawl over her shoulders and wended her way across the meadow to the Mills' homestead.

She found Ruth curled up on the sofa, her head buried in a pillow. She sat down beside her; putting her arms around the little figure, she pressed it closely to her heart. "I've heard all about it, dear," she whispered, "and I'm so sorry. Don't cry any more. Come over to my house, I've something to show you." Ruth wiped away her tears, and soon they were both tripping across the fields.

Having reached Miss Helen's house, they went upstairs to the second floor, on which were four rooms. Pausing before the door of one, she turned to Ruth and said tremulously, "I've never taken anyone in here before. This was my room long ago, when I was a young girl. I've never used it since—since I put girlhood behind me forever."

Opening the door, she went to a chintz-covered chest near the window, and opened it. A sweet, faint spiciness floated up into the room as she lifted out a dress of white embroidered muslin, ivory tinted, from its long seclusion.

"This, Ruth, was to have been my wedding dress," said Helen softly. "Long ago I was engaged to a young sea captain. When he left to go on his last voyage I promised to marry him when he returned, but his ship was lost, with all on board, during a terrific storm. My youth and happiness died then. Now, Ruth, I want you to take it to be married in."

"Oh, dear Miss Helen!" cried Ruth tenderly. "I couldn't; why, it would seem—"

"Wait, dear," interrupted Helen. "I don't want you to think I am making any sacrifice in giving you this dress. I've always wanted to see it worn by a bride; that is what it was made for."

"Thank you," said Ruth. "Oh, dear Miss Helen, thank you!" No bride could have looked sweeter and fairer than Ruth on her wedding day, and Miss Helen wept tears of joy.

BRIGHT DAYS AHEAD FOR THE FARMER

Congress Asked to Guarantee Wheat Price—Bean Crop Sure to Be Sold

Of all the producers the farmer is going to find himself in the best position financially during the period of readjustment, according to reports coming out of Washington from day to day. The United States Food Administration the other day asked Congress to appropriate $1,250,000,000 to maintain the price of wheat at $2.20, a figure guaranteed by the Government for the 1919 wheat crop prior to the ending of hostilities. It seems likely that the Food Administration will father other legislation and decrees which will protect the farmer against lowering prices.

Following hard upon that announcement the California Food Administration made public the fact that the Government is going to purchase virtually the entire bean crop of the state for the army and navy. The Government has been purchasing about 5000 tons of beans a month at a higher figure than beans ever brought before the war.

The average price of wheat to the farmer on July 1, 1914, was 76.9 cents per bushel. In other words the Government guaranteed to the wheat raiser for a period of two years an advance of 194 per cent over what his product brought in normal times. Competent authorities estimate that should the Government withdraw its guarantee now that the fighting is over, wheat would drop to at least $1.35 per bushel and probably lower. In the light of all this the Government expects the farmer to participate more than ever in the coming Victory Liberty Loan.

U. S. ORGANIZES SAVING SOCIETIES ALL OVER NATION

New York Thrift Clubs Meet Success, Says Times

The government of the United States is doing something it never did before—organizing societies. The Treasury Department has recommended and is furthering the formation of Thrift Clubs and War Savings Stamp societies in every shop, office, store and industry in the land, not to mention the thousands of such clubs already organized among the school children of the nation.

As an indication of the tremendous underlying importance of this new activity of the government to make America a nation of savers and investors, the New York Times in its issue of January 14 devotes a whole column of its financial page to a story of the initiation of Thrift Clubs among the employes of New York banks and the instant success of the idea. The Times says:

"The Thrift Club campaign for the sale of Stamps and Certificates in the downtown banks has brought a response that has surprised the campaign managers. Subscription to the Stamps in many cases has meant self-denial and sacrifice and many of the men and women workers are facing increases in the cost of living disproportionate to salary increases. Methods of meeting Stamp subscriptions as they come due are discussed at meetings of the societies and both men and women pledge themselves to do without such things as tobacco, candy, silk stockings and other luxuries."

One society with a 100 per cent membership in the office where it was formed, bought $4000 worth of War Savings Stamps and Certificates last year.
