A LOVE PROBLEM By MONA DORR.

As the train drew into Medfield, Lillien Thornton glanced appreciatively around the quiet little station. Its cleanliness had impressed her when entering the town.

Having come all the way from the city of Jamestown to teach at the disschool, the rural scenery gave her eling of contentment.

Francing out through the window in the tiny walting room she saw a small runabout stop and a tall man spring out.

He came into the station, and stepping up to her, hat in hand, asked : "Is this Miss Thornton?"

As the girl nodded, he continued:

"I'm Douglas Ramsey, superintendent of schools. Mrs. Gray asked me to meet you. You know the roads are so muddy." He threw her a reassuring smile as he picked up her bags and led the way to the car.

On the ride to Mrs. Gray's she learned that her companion was Mrs. Gray's near neighbor, living with his parents.

The beautiful scenery and lovely fields impressed Lillian, who had been used to city life, and the ride had not seemed a two-mile run when the car drew up before a low, old-fashioned ttage. Though it was the month of Potember, the grass was still a lovely The and the dahlins, gladioli and other late folinge, in their mingled glory of yellow, pink and red, seemed to nod a bright welcome to the girl. As they started up the graveled path the front door was opened and a plump, pleasant-faced woman smiled a welcome to Lillian. "We'll not require an introduction," said Mrs. Gray as she pressed the ed as follows: girl's hand.

After a few words, Superintendent Ramsey departed with the promise to call for Lillian the next day to introduce her to the new duties at Kelsey school.

Mrs. Gray's family consisted of her husband, a genial, hard-working farmer, and her six-year-old son Richard, who would start into school with the new teacher.

Lillian retired happy that night with the assurance of a pleasant home, one good scholar and the anticipation of ner of said Section 16; thence runnseveral others.

Tuesday morning found Lillian and small Richard starting out for the to the southwest corner of Section school, which stocd down the road a short distance. On the way Douglas joined them, and as they reached the schoolhouse they saw a group of eager little figures patiently waiting.

"Hello, Johnny! Well, how goes it, Ted?" and so on as the man greeted each smilling face.

When they had all assembled in the and said: "Boys and girls, this is our new teacher, Miss Thornton. How 2 N. R. 25 E. W. M. to the southwest Section 25; all of Section 26. many are going to do their very best to make this a model school this year," W. M., thence running in an easterly
