

DAINTY FUR WRAPS

Ermine and Coney the Popular Summer Fashion.

Every Ounce of Weight Has Been Eliminated by the Manufacturers in the Seasonable Apparel.

About this season the gray little ermine begins to change his snow white coat for a darker one that will exactly match the bare rocks upon which he disports. For him spotless white ermine is out of fashion temporarily; but it is ermine all the year round—the whitest of white ermine—for Dame Fashion! She cares little for the brownish hue of summer ermine—the color that the little animal selects to match his rock background—and most of the dainty little wraps for summer wear have narrow facings of ermine at the neck line. A few of them are all ermine; but these, of course, are the very expensive models.

White coney is a humble first cousin of the ermine, which has managed to obtain a place in high society. It is not always easy to tell genuine white ermine from the soft and really beautiful white coney, though the latter fur is much cheaper to buy. Sometimes ermine and coney are blended in the same wrap and usually a sprinkling of black ermine tails is enough to convey the all-ermine suggestion to an average observer.

And, after all, what does it matter, so long as a wrap is really attractive and smart? Solid worth in dollars is not the measure of merit in a summer fur garment as it is in a winter one; grace, daintiness, modishness are the chief requirements of Madame Mode and fur that is good enough to pass muster and not suggest actual cheapness.

The Paris frenzy for short sleeves, which is actually such an obsession just now that in Paris a long sleeve is conspicuous, has brought the question of summer fur wraps into fresh interest. Even a chiffon sleeve is warmer than no sleeve at all.

Very comfortable, at such times, to cuddle into a fur wrap, even though the date be mid-July; but the fur wrap must be feather-light and not burdensome to carry about. The wrap builders have seen to this; the little fur pelisses and capelets for summer time are the daintiest affairs imaginable. The beautifully dressed skins, soft and supple as silk, are lined with chiffon or with silk mousseline, or very soft, lightweight satin, and summer fur wraps dispense with quantities of dangling tails and animal heads—or in fact anything that could add an extra ounce of weight.

When not actually in use they must be carried on the arm—and a heavy fur wrap on a warm day would be an abomination to carry about. But a little capelet of mole or ermine lined with stirred chiffon is very different.

SATINE IS AGAIN IN FAVOR

The newest thing in fashions is a dress made of that old, despised fabric—satine. It is really stunning, too. The color is warm yellow and the embroidery is in brown and tan. The ribbons are blue. The little hat is sheer cream lace.

Neckwear for Summer.

Manufacturers of women's neckwear are busy adding new ideas for summer selling. Novelty waistcoat gumpies in organdie, net or lace have the major share of representation. Very narrow, dainty collars with ratching cuffs, designed especially for wear with the oval neckline, are also regarded as promising. Filling-in orders in veiling indicate that many types are included in the current demand. Fancy combination ties, all-over chenille dots and various new drape veils are favored.

ASKED HIM TO SEND THORAX

Specialist Invited to Forward X-Rays by Parcel Post Became Somewhat Satirical.

Dr. Simon Flexner of the Rockefeller Institute, who has just received one of the French government's highest decorations, told a story at a New York dinner.

"The medical ignorance of some people is staggering," he said. "I know an X-ray specialist who got a letter from a middle western farmer the other day. The farmer wrote: 'Dear Sir: I have had a nail in my thorax for 17 years. I am too busy to come to New York, but want you to come down here to Paris Corners with your rays, as my case will be worth your while. If you do not find time to come, send a dozen rays boxed, by express, with instruction card, and I will try to work same myself.'"

"The X-ray specialist wrote back to the farmer of Paris Corners:

"Dear Friend: I regret to say that business engagements prevent a trip to Paris Corners, and I am unfortunately out of rays just now. If you cannot come to New York, send me your thorax by parcel post and we will see what can be done."

The Persistent Echo.

"Good morning."
"Good morning."
"You remember that house you sold me last week?"
"Certainly."
"Well, I had my wife up to see it yesterday, and now I want to sell it back to you again."
"But you said you admired the house."
"I did."
"What fault do you find with it now?"
"It has an echo in it."
"That doesn't hurt it."
"Yes it does."
"In what way?"
"When my wife scolds me for staying out late the blamed old house will repeat it six or seven times, and gosh, how I do hate nagging!"—Hoboboth Sundry Herald.

Apricot Oil.

One good that is working out of the evil of war is the demonstration that chemists, under the spur of demand, can readily surpass the accomplishments of German science. The following is a concrete example: California has an annual by-product crop of 7,000 tons of apricot pits, which were formerly sold to Germany and Denmark at $45 a ton. When the war closed this market, and the price dropped to $15, a California chemist bought a supply and started experimenting.

He is now marketing a substitute for olive oil; a meal used in cooking; oil of apricot, known as bitter oil of almonds; American blue, from which Prussian blue can be made, and a number of other by-products.

American University in France. At Bourne, 175 miles southeast of Paris, is the seat of the new American Army university, which is, perhaps, the most outstanding of the educational work carried on by the American expeditionary force, says the Popular Mechanics Magazine. Housed in what was formerly an American hospital are 15,000 soldiers, students and a force of 500 teachers. The curriculum is notable for its agricultural college with a 600-acre farm.

At Home. The program at the Twentieth Century club was on Joan of Arc, her tortures and imprisonment. A small boy had been allowed to accompany his mother and had seemed much interested in the program. On the way home he said: "Take me again, mother. RESERVE OFFICERS TO HAVE A CHANCE TO FLY

The director of Air Service is arranging a plan to provide an opportunity for the reserve officers of the Air Service to keep up flying practice so that they will be of value to the government should an emergency arise. Otherwise the country will lose the experience these aviators have obtained and thus the money spent on their training would be wasted.

Many reserve officers have made known their desire to obtain flying practice and the government is in possession of quantities of flying equipment, planes of all types, hangars, repair outfits, etc., which will inevitably be scrapped unless some means is provided for their use by the flying men who have gone into the reserve.

It is contemplated to organize reserve units within the different localities. Reserve flying officers residing in the Sacramento valley district, as far south as Fresno in the San Joaquin valley and as far north as Seattle, Washington, who desire to belong to this reserve unit and receive a certain amount of training each year in the different types of machines, are requested to send their names, rank and address to Captain Thomas S. Voss, Mather Field, Sacramento, California, who has been designated by the Department Air Service Officer to list the officers for the Sacramento unit. Those residing in the Bay district would communicate with Lieutenant George B. Fredell, 711 Santa Fe Building, San Francisco, California. Those in the Los Angeles district, to Col. L. J. Mygatt, Ross Field, Arcadia, California. The district includes the area between Venice and San Bernardino and as far south to include Santa Ana. Those in the San Diego district to Col. Hanlon, Rockwell Field, San Diego, California, their district to include all towns in California south of Santa Ana.

It is also requested that all discharged enlisted men in the Air Service who desire to become members of a reserve unit to communicate with the officers designated above.

A plan whereby the above scheme can be effected, is now being arranged by the Director of the Air Service. At present no plan is in existence except that schools and colleges for reserve officers training corps units and colleges giving courses in military training prescribed by the secretary of war. It is believed that under this plan authority will be given whereby the reserve unit can utilize surplus stores of clothing, equipment and material.
