ECHOS FROM FARMERS' WEEK AT CORVALLIS

COUNTY FAIRS TO BE IMPROVED—GRAIN ROTATION DISCUSSED

Interesting Clippings From "Farmer's Week News," Published During Sessions Which Was Successful

Farmers' week at O. A. C. is becoming quite an institution and this year the greatest number of farmers took advantage of the short course in farming, stock-growing, horticulture, home economics and other subjects included in the curriculum than at any previous meeting.

Farmers, stockmen, fruitgrowers and others interested were present from all sections of the state and the proceedings were published in a daily newspaper, known as the "Farmer's Weekly News," which was established for the purpose.

From copies of the News received at this office we learn that Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Turner, their daughter, Miss Anita and their son, John Turner, County Agent Hunt and C. C.

AMERICANS ASKED TO BUY IRISH BONDS

REPUBLIC OF IRELAND AUTHORIZES $10,000,000 ISSUE

Oregon Asked to Subscribe $100,000. Morrow and Gilliam Counties $12,500

Morrow county people who believe in self-determination for small nations are to be given an opportunity to help Ireland in her fight for freedom and independence.

"Dial Eireann," the elected organ of the Irish people has authorized the sale of $10,000,000 in 5 per cent bonds and Irishmen, Irish-Americans and their friends in this country have been asked to subscribe $1,000,000 of that amount as their quota. Of this sum Oregon is expected to subscribe for $100,000 and Morrow and Gilliam counties combined have been asked to take $12,500.

F. A. McMenamin, of this city has been named by the state committee as chairman for Morrow and Gilliam.

JEWES OF LEMBERG HONOR PRESIDENT WILSON

The Jews of Lemberg, Galicia, recently paid a great tribute to President Wilson by placing his name in the Golden Book of the Jewish National Fund, which will be placed in some building in Jerusalem. It contains the names of those who have rendered some great service to the Jews. The photograph shows the certificate issued to Mr. Wilson.

"DRUGLESS MEDICINE" AND "BLOODLESS SURGERY"

Highest Medical Authority on Drugs

A few days ago the press announced, the world over, the death of the greatest authority on drugs, Dr. Osler, formerly of James Hopkins University, but of recent years of Oxford. The medical magazines and many other publications will be crowded with words of appreciation of what this man has contributed to science and it would be fitting here to again call attention to his contribution on the subject of drugs in the Encyclopedic Americana which is one of the latest and best works and may be seen in the Heppner school library. Dr. Osler says: "But the new school does not feel itself under obligation to give any medicine whatever." "The modern treatment of disease relies very greatly on the so called natural methods, diet and exercise, bathing and massage. In other words, giving the natural forces the fullest scope by easy and thorough nutrition, increased flow of blood, and removal of obstructions to the excretory system or the circulation in the tissues." This is the result partly of the remarkable experiments of the Paris and Vienna schools into the action of drugs, which have shaken the stoutest faiths. "There is but one conclusion to draw, that most drugs had no effect whatever on the diseases for which they were administered"—Encyclopedic Americana, Vol. X (Munn. & Co., New York.) The leading medical men of the world have given up drug practice. Unquestionably the future of the healing art is a combination of drugless prophylaxis (or prevention) and therapeutic (or cure) of disease, working hand in hand with conservative (or sane) surgery which operates only as a last resort and then only when there is some rational hope of benefit from taking radical measures.

Sometimes the simplest way to explain any thing is to contrast it with something else in the same class. I shall here contrast drugless methods and bloodless surgery with the traditional methods of practice in a case that came under my observation. "Renal calculus colic" is another term for a "stone" passing from the kidney to the bladder. The long narrow tube along which the urine passes from the kidneys down into the bladder is called the "ureter." What people want is facts. I shall not indulge in theories in these articles but contrast old and new ideas of treatment as applied in one actual experience. Have treated several very similar cases but will take this one and give all the particulars just as they occurred.

How Renal Calculus Colic Was Relieved

The history of the case, as I learned it from the patient, was as follows: The patient had been taken with a pain in the abdomen to the left of the navel and was compelled to lie down. A physician was sent for who went over the symptoms and concluded that it was probably an attack of intestinal indigestion. It is often very hard to determine such things by a merely "symptomatic" diagnosis, which is bound to be superficial and oftentimes misleading. He administered a cathartic. The pain was so severe that he was called back and after administering something to relieve the pain purgatives were administered again. But on the following day there seemed to be no change—unless it was for the worse—so they called in another physician. The two physicians concluded, so I was informed, it must be some inflammation of the small intestine, and so they proceeded to work on that theory until I was called on the case.

At once I proceeded to make careful examination of the patient's tissues along the spine. This, of course, had not been done by the other physicians since it is not a part of their diagnosis. In the region where the nerves come off from the spinal cord to supply the intestines, I found no trouble. This assured me that the bowels were not involved. Further on down the spine, however, on reaching the point of emergence of the nerve supply to the kidneys and ureters, I found the back was extremely congested, "sore" and sensitive under pressure. I knew, then, that the trouble was located there. The patient's temperature of 104. The pain, as he located it in the abdomen to the left of the navel and in the region of the small intestine, together with my examination of the spine located the trouble definitely to my mind in the ureter.

Relaxing the Ureters Permitted the Stone to Pass

I had the patient to lie upon the chest so that I could get at the spine as much as I needed. Over the nerve center supplying the ureter I relaxed tissues and made pressure until I had inhibited temporarily but not the nerve supply to the ureter itself. Thus isolated from the irritated nervous excitation, the ureter relaxed its spasm of over-tension and gradually distended its walls, whereupon the urine, pent up in the bladder, and in this tube behind the "stone" washed it down into the bladder, and the sufferer was relieved.

For eleven years, the first day of next month, I have resided in Morrow county, and during that time have treated every case of disease that has come to me and find that in this length of time only three or four cases examined by me in that length of time really needed to have the knife used. Pretty good record "don't you think?" The above articles appearing from week to week in this paper will be put in pamphlet form or reprint and you can have one

SELLING AS IMPROTANT AS BUYING

AN excerpt from an article in Western Advertising by Mr. Paul Findley, Retail Merchandiser of the California Fruit Growers Exchange says: "The adage 'well bought is half sold,' is pernicious—not that it is untrue, but because it fixes the merchant's mind on buying instead of on selling.

What the retailer must seek to learn is how to sell. He must think selling. He must plan selling. If he will do this and just to the extent that he does this, he will likely be a successful merchant."

Too many merchants are carrying on their shelves many hundreds of dollars worth of goods which their customers do not know is there.

The manufacturer, as a class, has come to the full realization of the absolute necessity of advertising as a means not alone to increase his sales, but also to cut down his selling cost. Yet, without the co-operation and backing up of the retailer, the advantage of the manufacturers advertising is discontinued considerably.

It is a psychological fact that nine times out of ten the housewife who reads an advertisement of a certain brand of goods which she wants or the desire for which is created by the advertisement, will go to the store which has advertised, to purchase that particular article, and will not think to ask the merchant where she regularly trades for it, even though she goes to him for the rest of her order—and this she does not always do, either, but goes on and completes her order at the other store.

Too many merchants play the spider-and-the-fly game, sitting in the store waiting for trade to run into them, and ask for what it wants.

They may buy the best of widely advertised goods, at right prices, and then sit down and expect their customers to be mind-readers, so far as letting them know they have stocked these goods is concerned.

Merchants! Awake to the necessity of advertising. The biggest, strongest, cheapest sales force at your command. It is no longer an amulet, thenightsoftheoldenultra etc ah a hr ah and known quantity—a thing to be guessed at, to use only to tell of a move or a special sale, but advertising is the ally, tried and true, of the progressive business world, an exact science, a commodity without dimension, to be used not alone at Christmas and Easter and a few special occasions, but every day in the year; and, unlike any other valuable possession, the more you use it the better it grows.

STATE CHAMBER HELD PROFITABLE MEETING

F. R. BROWN, WHO REPRESENTS JOHN DAY DISTRICT RETURNS

Passing of Old Time "Wind Jammers" Presence of Modern Live Wires Noted

F. R. Brown, who attended the annual meeting of the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce at Portland last week as a representative of the John Day Irrigation district, has returned to Heppner and speaks in the highest praise of the work of the session.

Mr. Brown was a member of the Heppner delegation that attended the initial meeting last winter when the state chamber was organized and he says he noted a big increase not only in the members attending but also to a great extent in the calibre of the men present. The sessions were strictly business throughout and no long-winded, old time political or near political speeches were attempted nor would they have been permitted had some old time brother undertook to put one over.

Speakers were uniformly brief and to the point and those present were thus enabled to get a line on the general needs of Oregon as a commonwealth or combination of communities. Not a single resolution was passed or recommendation made only for some proposition which is of general interest to the state at large. An effort was made to secure the endorsement of the chamber for some purely local measure but all such efforts were promptly "aqueled."

The John Day project was recognized as one of the coming big projects of Oregon and was recommended to the Oregon Irrigation Congress which will meet in Portland this week, for further consideration.

Mr. Brown says that in a broad sense irrigation was the big question at all the sessions as hardly a subject was considered but what, in some way touched on the reclamation of Oregon's arid and semi-arid lands.

Practically every city, town and village in Oregon that has any sort of commercial organization was represented by from one to half a dozen delegates.

F. A. Anderson, who went to Portland during the session on private business and who hoped to be able to represent the Heppner Commercial club at the meeting, was unable to do so because of the pressure of personal business affairs.

WATER CONSTRUCTION BIDS TO BE OPENED WEDNESDAY

City council held a lively meeting Monday evening when Mayor Vaughan called attention to the fact that bids for the construction of the new gravity water system will be opened Wednesday evening in the council chamber and urged that all citizens and taxpayers who feel interested should be present. The mayor and council are acting for the people in this matter and their want all proceedings to be open and above-board and as nearly as possible accessible to everybody.

Mr. Burns, head of the engineering firm having the work in charge is here and every step taken in the matter will be under his close supervision.

Representatives of iron, concrete and wooden pipe manufacturers are also here and it is expected that a large number of bids will be submitted.

Tom Hughes was appointed city treasurer, vice Joseph P. Williams, deceased.

The council voted to appropriate $25 a month for the use of the Heppner Commercial club.

An ordinance was ordered prepared fixing a license of $15 a year on small trucks and delivery vehicles and $25 a year on taxicab trucks and delivery business in the city.

A light was ordered placed over the playground on the sidewalk in front of the J. J. White property on Center street.

The meeting was adjourned until this evening.

MORROW WILL BE REPRESENTED AT IRRIGATION CONGRESS

Morrow county will be ably represented at the irrigation congress in Portland this week, arrangements having been made whereby Hon. Emmett Callahan and S. H. Boardman, both of Boardman, will jointly represent the Boardman and Heppner commercial club. Mr. Callahan is one of Oregon's most gifted public speakers and Mr. Boardman has, perhaps, more genuine "dope" on the John Day project than any other man in the state. F. R. Brown, secretary, and F. A. McMenamin, attorney for the John Day district, will also attend the congress and the quartette will make a strong combination.

BOARDMAN POLITICIANS HERE

S. H. Boardman, C. W. Cobb and O. M. Warner are here from Boardman on road business and are, perhaps, incidentally, starting a few new presidential bones. Mr. Boardman, who is the original Hoover man, is somewhat chagrined that his candidate has refused to run while Mr. Cobb, who is boosting H. Johnson sky high, is correspondingly well pleased as he has been advising his neighbors to honorize on Hoover as a presidential candidate and to hitch their wagon to the hi men—Johnson. Mr. Warner has not yet committed himself on the political situation but he intimated to a Herald reporter that he is not always asleep when his eyes are shut and that he is apt to spring a political sensation on a lot of his neighborhood politicians about the time the next cold wave strikes. Mr. Boardman is thinking of urging a re-investigation to determine whether Mr. Hoover can decline to run in the face of the endorsement of the metropolitan of northern Morrow and away with it.

PALACE HOTEL CORNER SOLD

Bids were opened yesterday by Frank Gilliam, trustee in the bankruptcy proceedings of the Palace Hotel Co., for the purchase of the property.

Two bids were submitted, one by H. S. Corrigall of $8,227, and one by W. J. Begner, of $8,050. Mr. Corrigall's bid being considered the highest and best bid was accepted subject to the approval of the referee in bankruptcy.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTION

The recent sales of real estate to be reported by E. M. Shutt include the purchase by W. F. Hill of the half section home ranch of Frank O. Hanson, seven miles up Willow creek, at a consideration of $6,000.

Mr. Hill also sold his Heppner property to W. O. Bayless for $1750.

Last week Mr. Shutt disposed of the H. Taylor Hill farm six miles up Baker creek, familiarly known as the Dan Slater ranch, to James H. Gentry and his son, Emory, of this city, at a consideration of about $25,000. The Gentry's will take charge of the same the coming spring.
