About Sunset Magazine

Sunset the Pacific Monthly, is the West's own national magazine. It is the only "general" magazine of national circulation and influence published in the West. It is therefore distinctly representative of the West in its viewpoint and in its treatment of world and national affairs. Beautifully printed and artistically illustrated, crammed full of interest for every member of the family, it is distinctly a FAMILY magazine. It should be on the reading table of every Western household.

Savages Use Tooth Brushes.

The manufacturer of a popular dental powder advertises that "Savages lead a different kind of life from us, and therefore nature takes care of their teeth without artificial help." Well, the wanderer in remote places, saw this and laughed. "I know of at least three African tribes," he said, "that brush their teeth regularly. Each person carries a twig of a certain thorny tree. They chew the end of it into a good bunch of bristles, and spend a quarter-hour each morning cleaning their teeth thoroughly. They tie a string to the twig and dangle it from the waist cord, if they have no other clothes to fasten it on. It is an important thing to them."

Banfare of Sermons.

A writer in the Sunday at Home asks the question: Do ministers ever burn their sermons? One of them, it appears, does, and has given his reasons for so doing, and here they are: "Because I did not propose to have my children burdened with my old sermons; because as a result of the war we are in a new day; because I propose to show my wife that there is a lot of 'preach' left in me yet; because I once read in Horace Bushnell that if all the sermons of the country should burn down in a single night, consuming all the sermons of all the ministers, a great revival would sweep over the land!"

Keep Cheerful.

Now's the time to cheer up and gear up. Don't let a lowering horizon of human rumblings disturb you. There have been many dark days before and they were followed by sunshine. There has been distress of nations and it has been followed by great marches of progress. The days of the present are the prelude to coming great things. Look the world in the face and touch it to respect you. Marshal your forces in such order that you have them in easy command and you are geared to serve. After all it's the cheerful face and the geared up life that brings things to pass in this world.—GIL.

World's Wettest Spot.

The wettest place distinction, so long held by Cherrapunji in Assam, seems to have passed to Nalaeale, in the island of Kaula, Hawaii. This spot is seldom free from clouds, and Prof. D. H. Campbell of Stanford university finds that the rainfall of 1912 to 1919, inclusive, averaged 518 inches yearly, the amount on one occasion having been 30 inches a day for five days. The yearly average for the world is variously estimated at 30 to 36 inches. The Cherrapunji average for 40 years has been 426 inches, though the 1961 report was 505 inches.

Historic Stonehenge.

The old temple, now known as Stonehenge, has withstood the ravages of weather, time, and man himself for 25 centuries. The people who built it belonged to the neolithic period, or age of polished stones. Iron was unknown to them, but bronze implements, such as swords and spear heads, were just beginning to be introduced. They were far too expensive, however, to be in general use, and the chisels used in cutting the stones were also of stone. These are found in great numbers near by, where the workers threw them after they had worn out.

Puzzles.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Perkins, "everything you see in print now refers to some problem." "I have observed it." "I wish we could go back to the style of literature that prevailed in our parents' time and keep all the puzzle pages in the back part of the magazine."

In Washington.

"I wish," said the head of the department, "to let some of my clerks go." "Why?" "I have nothing for them to do." "Huh," said Senator Graball, "that's a queer reason for wanting to let clerks go!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

An Early Riser.

"Do you find the same old trouble in getting your boy awake in the morning?" "No. It's the other way around now. Since he was in the army Josh has made it his business to wake up everybody at daybreak, blowing a bugle."
