Famous Hymn.

The words of the hymn "I Hear Thy Welcome Voice" were written by Lewis Harbison, and for that matter the music, too, was written by that composer. Both words and music were first published in a monthly, a Guide to Holiness, a copy of which was sent to Ira D. Sankey while he was in England in 1873. He immediately adopted it and had it published in "Sacred Songs and Solos."

Chilean Traffic Rules.
There are no road rules nor speed limits in Chile outside of the cities, but the speed limit in the cities is 25 kilometers (15 1/2 miles) an hour. In the traffic rules of the various Chilean cities there is a lack of uniformity, the Valparaiso regulations requiring an automobile to pass to the right of a coming car, while in Santiago it must pass to the left.

Heart Disease.
I hear of a man who fussed 30 years about having heart disease. Lately he said: "After all, I'll be cursed if I don't believe I will finally die of something else."—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

To End Wire "Singing."
To prevent the "singing" of telephone or telegraph wires passing over houses, these are muted by putting on them small olive-shaped pieces of lead, or fitting caps on to them.

NO "RAZ PORTER" ABOUT THIS POETRY

Sending a remittance to peg his subscription up a year in advance W. Windsor, who is holding down a homestead some 27 miles south of Ione in the Rock creek country, adds the following post scrip to his letter: "I am bucked and gagged here until spring with a bunch of towhead cattle but I will call and see you when I get to town and we will go out and get on a Raz Porter tear and paint the town in celebration of my emancipation from this monotonous life for I am away out here—

Where the dewdrops fall and the wild birds nest,
Where the wild rose blooms on the prairie crest;
Where the coyote howls and the wind sports free,
Midst the Rock creek hills on the lone prairie."

No Raz Porter kick about that stuff.

PEOPLE TURN TO HOOVER

It is funny about Hoover, how people turn to him like tired children. He is not a politician, not so far as known, a Presbyterian. Heaven knows whether he stands in with Brother Bryan's purpose to make prohibition permanent or not. Heaven knows what treaty reservations or interpretations he would accept or reject. What is known about him is that he is the greatest living helper of mankind in practical matters. We think of him as a man who can put more dinners into more people, and more milk into more babies, and more money into empty pockets, and more roofs over unsheltered families, and more clothes on bodies and shoes on bare feet than any one else in sight. These are all homely exploits, but the world just now needs to have them done. It needs Hoover, and Hoover's knowledge, and his great gift of organization and his great heart. It is not certain that he is fit to be president. He is a curious man, almost as curious as Mr. Wilson, almost as much of an autocrat, almost as prone to work things out in his own head and then slam them through with such instruments as he can find. But he is big, and when he sees a great need he runs to it with blankets and food. And he is the farthest possible from the flabby, sentimental type. He will spend money or lend it, but he will not waste it. People's hearts turn to him because he is not the senate and not the constitution, and because his checks and balances can be cashed and will weigh. When Mr. Gerard at the Jackson dinner quoted the South Dakota man who said: "I am for Judge Gerard, but he is not the best candidate. The best candidate is Herbert Hoover," he showed himself a truly artful man for he made the hearts that warm to Hoover warm also to Gerard.

If we could have elections at will as they can in England, Hoover could be chosen president in sixty days. Our mechanisms of government have stalled dreadfully this last year and ought to go to the shop. The question presses what to do with them, and if they don't work better very soon the pressure will become peremptory. They are unexcelled just now for efficiency in keeping little men in power (by no means meaning Mr. Wilson) and keeping big men out.

BOARDMAN NEWS

J. H. Weaver, Weldon Weaver and Oral Weaver were land lookers in the community last week and expect to return for a more thorough investigation next month.

A committee of citizens is investigating the Embarger water system with the idea of taking control under lease for a time to see if an improvement in the service cannot be had.

The Farm Bureau meets Friday evening, February 13th, at the usual place. A program and refreshments have been arranged. All having bills against the rabbit fund should file with the secretary.

The directors of the Irrigation district, Mr. Schilling, Mr. Camp and Mr. McFarland met with the Boardman people last Saturday afternoon, to explain the points in the contract between the district and the government in preparation for the day to be held February 24th.

Rev. Boyd of New York, and Rev. Body of Hood River, met the people of the community church on the evening of February 5th and outlined the New Era movement calling attention to the challenge that is placed upon the present day church and outlining a plan for organization to meet the challenge.

Mr. Emery of the Ellison and White Chautauqua was in town last week looking over the field. He found the community not quite ready to meet the expenses necessary to carrying on a chautauqua. As soon as the new school is finished and the auditorium available for use there will be many educational and entertainment featured introduced to supply the community need along this line.

But if that treaty is ratified things may start up, and our feet again be planted in the paths of duty, and our ears be relieved from the affliction of listening so much to persons who have noises in the head that they mistake for political thoughts.

Such persons, by the way, must have been in control in Albany when the assembly excluded the five socialists for belonging to a political party "that is inimical to the best interests of the state."—Life.

BIGGS MOTHERS TO BEAT ENEMY

(By the State and Nation, Selected)

Washington, N. Y.—Mrs. George Biggs, mother of the first American officer killed in France, has written an open letter to her countrymen asking them to join the women everywhere in opposing anything that would bring the bodies of soldiers dead.

"I am a gold star mother," her letter, in part, says, "with, when my son was killed in France the first officer—or the very beginning of America's participation, hurried away there to work for the comfort of our army. I am thoroughly acquainted with conditions there, and am as bitterly opposed to the inhuman and dreadful idea of bringing the bodies home, that I seek to enlist against it the gold star women of this land.

"I intend to publish a pamphlet, which I will gladly send gratuitously to any woman who will send me her name and address."

Mrs. Carlsson's address is 610 W. 114th street, New York City.
