

INTER CHURCH CONFERENCE IN MORROW COUNTY

In the conference to be held by the Interchurch World Movement in this county early in April, considerable time will be given to reports of results received from the foreign surveys made during the last year by the Interchurch movement and upon which are based budget estimates for foreign missions which form a considerable part of the askings in the united simultaneous campaign.

Ministers who will have charge of the campaign in this county are: Rev. G. H. Young, Albany; Rev. C. W. McReynolds, Corvallis; Rev. W. J. Luscomb, Ontario; Rev. S. Earl Dubois, Portland.

Dates of the conference will be announced later.

SALVATION ARMY TO ACQUIRE INDUSTRIAL FARM HOME

Portland, March 20.—With enthusiasm unparalleled in the history of social service in Oregon, members of the recently formed county advisory boards of the Salvation Army Home Service Plan for 1920, in convention at the Hotel Portland Wednesday not only adopted a budget of $244,000 asked for by the state advisory board, but increased this budget to approximately $284,000.

The increase was made to include in the 1920 program the purchase of the Bishop Scott school and 100 acres on farm near Yamhill in Yamhill county for a Salvation Army Industrial Home and Agricultural school in which to educate and build up juvenile dependants and orphans.

The budget includes items of purchase or construction of buildings and the expansion of the Salvation Army field work so that the smallest community in the state will be served.

The budget was asked in the report which was a condensation of the findings of the state advisory board after a study of the confidential reports of the county boards detailing conditions in their counties. It is the first complete study of the state of Oregon with the end in view of tabulating its needs for a direct service to take care of indigents, and orphans as well as to serve the friendless, homeless and suffering.

Following the presentation of the report by Secretary Henry E. Reed of the state board its adoption was moved by J. M. Hawkins, chairman of the Linn county board, who prefaced his motion by a story of the work the Salvation Army was now doing in his district. The motion was seconded by Dr. B. F. Pound of Salem, and passed unanimously.

Adjournment to luncheon was followed by a program of addresses during which Judge Geo. Stapleton, vice chairman of the state board told of the need of a school in Oregon to care for its dependent juvenile.

It was announced that the Salvation Army had had offered to it for such a purpose the Bishop Scott home at a very modest price.

Ex-Senator F. J. Miller of Albany, arose and led a spontaneous movement which swept the convention off its feet and which led to a motion made by Judge Stapleton and seconded by Dr. Pound being placed before the convention for a vote. The motion asked for an increase of approximately $40,000 in the budget to cover the expense of purchasing and reopening the home as a state-wide institution under Salvation Army jurisdiction. The motion carried with a roar of eyes and applause.

The convention turned the financial phase of the campaign over to John L. Etheridge, who as director general will build up an organization throughout the state. The financial program will receive the backing and support of advisory boards in every county of the state.

It was announced at the convention that the budget would be divided between Portland and the state outside of Portland so that half will be raised in the metropolis and half in the country. The quotas will be announced later.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP NOT ALL BAD

They say government ownership of railroads incurred a deficit of $715,000,000. Well, during the war the government operated railroads carried government troops, free of cost, and put the kibosh on useless and unnecessary travel. This might account for a little of the deficit. The government didn't go into the railroad business to make a record or pile up a surplus. They went into the railroad business to get service after private systems had failed to get troops to the ships and supplies to the docks. The terminals were glutted when the government took control, cleared the depots got troops and supplies to the seaboard, won the war and got all the troops back home safe and sound free of charge. We're not ranting, yet, for government ownership, but government operation during and after the war was not the monumental failure that its enemies allege.—Vancouver Sun.

A FIT MAN FOR THE JOB

Mr. Strain is the right type of man for membership on the public service commission. His talents and experience particularly fit him for work of this sort. As assessor of Unatilla county he went deeply into the subject of railroad taxation and was successful in forcing the roads to pay their just share of the taxes of this county. He was a good investigator and his work stood the test of the courts.

Eastern Oregon needs a man of this stripe on the public service commission. We need a man who will truly represent the people of this section and will face his duties fearlessly yet with fairness to all, as Mr. Strain would strive to do if elected.

It is the judgment of this newspaper that if Mr. Strain runs for the commission he will have a splendid chance for election.—East Oregonian.
