OREGON EDUCATIONAL COSTS LESS THAN OTHER STATES

Even with the added support provided by the higher educational relief bill, the Oregon Agricultural College would be spending $70 less per student per year than the Agricultural Colleges of Michigan, Iowa, Indiana, Kansas and Washington, taken as example. This estimate is based on the present attendance at O. A. C. without allowance for increases although attendance has increased 148 per cent in the last 7 years, while income from the state in the same period has increased less than 4 per cent. The State University is equal low in its expenditures in comparison with other state institutions.
