AMERICAN LEGION MEET AT ASTORIA

Astoria, Ore.—The committee on arrangements for the State Convention of the American Legion, Department of Oregon, was more than pleased yesterday when news was received from Pendleton Post that the post in the Round-up city would be represented in the convention parade with a big delegation and one of the Round-up stage coaches. The dates of the convention which is to be held in Astoria are, July 30, 31 and August 1st. The parade which is to be one of the big attractions will be held Saturday afternoon, July 31st. Invitations are being sent out by the committee on arrangements to all posts in the state to be represented in what is expected to be the biggest ex-service men's parade since the cessation of hostilities. Prizes are to be offered for the best float or other representation and for the largest number of members any post has, in line, in proportion to its membership.

Will Feed Ex-Doughboys Clams

Astoria, Ore.—Seaside, the progressive beach resort near Astoria will entertain the members of the American Legion in Oregon on Sunday, August 1, following the closing of the State Convention in Astoria, on Saturday, July 31. The patriotic residents of Seaside have assured the committee on arrangements for the convention they will entertain the visiting Legionnaires with a big clam feed and other features that promise to make the day an eventful one. Band concerts, dancing, athletic stunts, etc., will be included on the program.

The grand climax and principle feature of the evening will be the reproduction of the battle of the Argonne to be staged by Hitt Fireworks Company of Seattle under the auspices of Clatsop Post No. 12, American Legion. The engagement will be principally a pyrotechnic exhibition, but will also show the battle ground with ex-service men participating. The action will be begun at dusk and will include the various signal lights used in actual battle such as flares, very lights, colored rockets. The opening bombardment of enemy positions and barrage that precedes the infantry will be produced.

STATE CHAMBER FINANCE DRIVE NOW ON.

In an initial effort Portland has raised more than $25,000 a year—a total exceeding $105,000 for the next three years—towards the $450,000 budget sought by the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce to carry on its intensive state-wide development work.

Late this month has been tentatively fixed for the resumption of the Portland campaign to increase the present figures to $60,000 a year, which is Portland's quota. The fact that two big conventions are in progress at the present time, and that the Shriners will convene here this week, makes this recess desirable. Despite these handicaps, however, many of the workers in the Portland canvass favored continuing at work. But the opinion prevailed that better results would be achieved after the conventions.

The majors and captains have retained their lists of prospective subscribers and are expected to turn in several thousand dollars before the canvass is actively resumed.

The intensive canvass throughout Oregon began June 15th in six cities—Corvallis, Eugene, Bend, Enterprise, Marshfield and Klamath Falls. These places are thoroughly organized for the effort and early reports indicate that they will more than their quotas.

Other cities where the canvass will be conducted during the next two weeks include North Bend, Newport, Toledo, Prineville, Joseph, Springfield, Lakeview, Coquille, Redmond, Cottage Grove, Myrtle Point, Madras and Jefferson County, Wallowa, Harrisburg, Albany, Bandon, Reedsport, Gardiner and Maupin.

Changed His Mind.

He was well up in the sixties and always got a lot of pleasure out of walking. He would always say: "You city people don't get out enough and walk."

In his short stay in the city he stepped into his son's downtown magazine shop and said: "I just walked down from Thirty-fourth street." With pride he added: "That's not bad for a young fellow like me! And, by the way, your wife gave me this note and said for me to stop and get these things. Where is this store?"

"That's the department store just a square up the street—this street," replied his son.

"A department store! Where is that errand boy you have around here? I'm too tired to walk up there," replied the old man.

Slow to Learn.

"This newly made millionaire is an uncouth fellow."

"So he is. Yet he frequents the most fashionable restaurants."

"That's why I think it strange that he is so backward in acquiring a polish. The mere contemplation of a faultless head waiter ought to give him some ideas of deportment."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

MYSTERIOUS J. C. B.

By MARTHA E. EATON.

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

As Kathie Laurence was hurrying down Commonwealth avenue, she found a letter, stamped, and addressed to Mr. Page B. Cushman, Portland, Me. She inquired of the passers-by if they had lost it.

"They all answered 'no,' so she decided to mail it. All day long the name, Page B. Cushman, kept running through her head.

"I wonder if he is young, old, married or single."

Then she wondered who had written the letter, and if they were worrying. "If I only knew," she said. Reading the paper, these words caught her eye: "Lost—A letter addressed to Page B. Cushman, Portland, Me. Finder please return to J. C. B., care Boston P—."

"Mercy, what shall I do?" She decided to write to J. C. B., and tell him that she found the letter and had mailed it to the addressee. To think was to act, with Kathie. She signed her letter, K. W. L., that was all, but she knew she had relieved the mind of J. C. B.

Mr. Page B. Cushman received his letter in due time, so J. C. B. received the answer from him, shortly after his advertisement appeared in the paper.

But J. C. B. was crazy to know who had done him the kindness of mailing the letter.

He was young and fond of adventure, so put a "personal" in a paper: "Will K. W. L. please communicate with J. C. B., as same would like to express thanks in person."

"Mother!" called Kathie, excitedly, "come here!"

"What ever is the matter?" asked her mother, as she came hurrying in. "Listen," and Kathie read the personal. "Shall I tell him—or her—or it, who I am?"

"Certainly not," answered mother. So J. C. B. remained in ignorance. In the meantime Mr. Page B. Cushman came to Boston on business, met J. C. B., and he told him the letter had been lost.

Cushman became interested also in the person who had had the good sense to mail it.

Katherine went to Portland for a party to which her college chum, Eleanor Page, had invited her.

In their bed-time confidences she related the story of the lost letter.

Eleanor chuckled at the name of the addressee, but said never a word.

Eleanor was disappointed, she concluded. Everything was ready for the party. All was jolly and bright. Eleanor and Kathie awaited the coming of the guests. They arrived, a lively jolly bunch of young people.

"Kathie," said Eleanor, when the dance was over, "meet my cousin, Mr. Page B. Cushman." Kathie fairly jumped, but acknowledged the introduction with a smile.

She thought, what a fine looking man. As for Page, his heart gave a big thump when he looked into two beautiful brown eyes, uplifted to him.

They danced and their steps were in perfect unison.

During the evening Kathie said: "Who is J. C. B.?"

"J. C. B.? I am sure I don't know," answered Mr. Cushman.

"You don't?" questioned Kathie; "that's strange," she added.

They danced and Kathie forgot her curiosity as to the person of J. C. B. Then Eleanor danced with her cousin and said: "Who is J. C. B. Page?"

"For heaven's sake, Eleanor, who is this mysterious J. C. B.?"

"That's what I want to know," remarked she with a twinkle in her eye. "Miss Laurence also asked me the same question."

"Yes, we want to know."

"Well, why ask me?"

"Because you must know; he is a friend of yours."

"Is he?"

"Well, he wrote you a letter and lost it."

"Oh!"

"And Kathie found it."

The holidays over, Kathie went back to Boston. Page was often in her mind.

Eleanor came up to Boston to shop and stayed with Kathie.

They were driving down Washington street in Kathie's car, when they saw Page with a big fellow like himself, hurrying along in the crowd.

"Oh, Page!" called Eleanor. He turned and saw Eleanor, and the girl he knew now was the one girl for him.

"Bradley, this is my cousin, Miss Page, and Miss Kathie Laurence."

"Mr. Bradley and I have met before, haven't we, Jack?"

"We certainly have, Kathie."

"Eleanor, behold J. C. B., John C.

Bradley," continued Page.

"Then you did use your own initials, Jack."

"I mailed your letter."

"You're a wonder, Kathie; you put a nice little sum in both our pockets."

"I'm glad," quietly, with a smile in Page's eyes. The young men were in the car by this time, being rushed to Kathie's home by her mad driving.
