Last Night's Dreams - What They Mean

DREAM CITIES.

IT IS not an uncommon experience to find ourselves in a dream city.

It is generally agreed that if your city of dreams is a strange one to you, and you are lost in it, you will shortly change your residence with, as a rule, favorable results to your business.

All scientists do not agree with Freud that every dream is the fulfillment of a wish, but it is easy enough to fit this dream into its category.

Mother's Cook Book

Some one has said that "true hospitality consists in having what you were going to have anyway, and not changing the cloth unless you were going to anyway."

Good Things for the Family.

Stir one cake of compressed yeast in one-fourth of a cup of lukewarm water, add one cupful of scalded and cooled milk and one and one-half cupfuls of flour; beat until smooth.

Chico's Popovers.

Break three eggs into a bowl, add half a teaspoonful of salt, and one cupful each of milk and flour.

Hard Sauce.

Beat one-third of a cup of soft-mixed butter to a cream, add one cupful of light brown sugar gradually; when well mixed add two tablespoonfuls of cream, drop by drop, and lastly one teaspoonful of vanilla and a few drops of lemon extract or a grating of lemon rind.

Adjectives.

Did you ever stop and consult the dictionary while reading advertising matter written by experts?

Sometimes we nearly goggle our fool heads off over some of the adjectives employed.

The other day we were asked point blank, in type big enough for a farm sale bill, if we had ever seen such "startling values" as were shown in somebody's kind of underwear!

"Startling"—not it! Good old "steeple" is worn throughout and nobody would notice it, so it had to be "startling."

To begin with, can you imagine yourself, unless delicious, being "startled" by any underwear's value?

You might be "pleased" if it was your own underwear.

You wouldn't care two whoops about it if it was the underwear of some one else, would you?

You wouldn't even so much as know about it, if you are the modest and polite person we hope you are.

We can imagine one's being "startled" by underwear, but not in that way.

The sudden display of anyone's intimate garments in public is not the least "startling" thing we know of.

When we had been walking for four or five blocks in a well-lighted street, with a young lady behind us that we had a never-absent unspoken hope of impressing favorably—even when we have found that one of our (speaking plainly) garrets was dragging the pavement, we have been "startled" and so would anybody else have been if we had said loudly what our impulse dictated.

We have even been worse than "startled" when we involuntarily glanced toward the observing young lady and noted that she looked elsewhere but smiled pleasantly.

That was the young lady "startled" by the quality of our garret?

No. When she first saw it twitching along like a purple electric eel, she may have been "startled."

But not of the value of the thing.

The young man who attempted to pull a thread from the young lady's shoulder and ultimately, as discovered by her mother, entirely removed the young lady's union suit by revealing that young man may have been "startled" and suspicious at the length of the thread he pulled out.

But "startled" at the value of some one's underwear?

A brace of mugs.

Good things is never "startling" to us except when we get it in dealing with a man we had thought was crooked.

Some advertisers should change their stock of adjectives.
