

How Big Men Do It

MANY a big man can trace his success in life to the time when he deposited his first dollar with some progressive bank.

That was the seed out of which later grew tremendous success. Many a great industry has sprung from such a humble beginning.

A NEW GRASS.

Lexington, Ore., Jan. 14, 1921.—To the Editor: I wish to express my opinion and have others express their observations of a certain grass that made its appearance in Morrow county six years ago, called by many the “hurry-up” grass. This grass is much like the red top, and is rapidly spreading over the county. In the past two years it has spread into Washington. It has a very light seed that is carried by the wind, and spreads over the country more rapidly than any grass or weed that has ever shown up in eastern Oregon. Will it prove a benefit or detriment? I have observed its spread and noted its growth and effects in the fields, gardens and range. Will give some of the benefits that the stock men will be benefitted by its appearance. Then I shall give my opinion of the damage it may prove to the farmer.

I find that all classes of stock readily eat it, and that it comes early in the fall and spring, and that it makes good hay that stock readily eat, and if pastured close will continue to grow rapidly till late in June, and will keep at least six feed of stock where the bunch grass would keep but one. This grass promises to revolutionize the stock industry in eastern Oregon. It forms a sod in less time than red top, bluegrass or any tame grass known to me and it is my opinion it will cause the farmer more work and cultivation to rid the fields than any obnoxious weed, not excepting the Russian thistle or Jim Hill mustard. I have great fear of this grass taking the alfalfa fields, gardens and small fruit orchards, and will require three or four times the work in them to keep the grass from seeding.

This grass made its appearance six years ago in Blackhorse section and two years ago they cut the field, or much of it, for hay. That was summarily followed and seeded to wheat. In the fall the grass had taken it.

The better the land, the better this grass grows. On the light soil it grows as other grasses and vegetation grows, and takes the moisture rapidly from the soil and other grain or vegetation.

I will hope to hear from farmers and stock men, and particularly from our county agent, Mr. Hunt.

I am undecided whether to try and protect the wheat fields and continue to raise wheat at a greater loss and cost, or let the “hurry-up” grass have its way, and turn in more stock and let them grow fat.

FARM AND HOME REMINDERS.

Persons who are not growing any asparagus on their farms for some time should figure on putting in a small crop next spring. Preparation for work should be made now, as there is always a strong demand about planting time. The asparagus can be kept in the ground until planting time—April. Ample space for an average family may be obtained from 150 to 250 plants. Circulars on how to plant asparagus may be obtained by writing college extension, Oregon Agricultural College, at Corvallis.

Milk, eggs and well cooked vegetables will produce better growth of children than meat, which should be used sparingly or not at all until the child is six or seven years old. For very young children the vegetables may be cooked, put through a sieve and given with milk or on toast.—Home economics, O. A. C.

It is preferable to plow the garden first and dish the manure in. Plowing it under will bury it deeper than it should be, sometimes getting it as far as ten or twelve inches below the surface. If the ground is plowed first and the manure disked under the shallow root vegetables will get the benefit.—Vegetable gardening, O. A. C.

Vegetables grown in the northwest should be grown from seeds grown in the northwest. Climatization of these seeds makes them better. This is especially so of sweet corn, cabbage and root crops. Seed obtained from a reliable seed dealer is preferable to that bought in packages at the grocery, most of which is middle of the benefit.—Vegetable gardening, O. A. C.

Salt May Be Cause of Cancer.
Dr. Joseph De Stephanis has recently advanced the theory that the use of salt may be the cause of cancer, and he quotes some instances that seem to indicate that such is the case. Some other physicians, however, take issue with him and the statement is made that in Italy where salt is eaten in great quantities there is very little cancer.

Enough said.

Frequently a question contains its own answer. Such a question was the one put recently by a Kansas young woman who had failed to qualify for a position as teacher. Feeling that she had not been considerably dealt with, she wrote: “I think I am entitled to an explanation of why I failed, anyway.”—Boston Transcript.

MARSHALL PHILIPS THE POST.

Marshall Phillips, popular young man of Heppner circulated a petition this morning asking for the appointment to the local postmastership. Practically every business man in town placed his name on the list. Mr. Phillips is a popular and capable young businessman and served with the marines during the world war, and everybody will wish him well in his candidacy for a position which calls for qualities he possesses—efficiency, courtesy and a desire to render real service to his patrons.

Well! 1920 IS GONE

—And with it has gone our profits, as well as yours. The past year has been a hard one for everyone alike. The farmer and stock-grower had to take immense losses—and so did we.

—WE HAVE TAKEN OURS—Our inventory has been taken and the losses crossed off. We are not going to say how great they have been—they were enough.

—WE ARE GLAD IT IS OVER.

—Every article in this store has been reduced regardless of its first cost, and marked right down to and below its present worth on the markets of the world.

—Let’s forget 1920 and get together and push for a successful and prosperous 1921.

—We cannot do it all, and neither can you. But if we all get together and push, and push hard, things will come out all right.
