JOHN DAY TAXPAYERS HOLD LIVELY MEETING

mass meeting, but their names were simply written in on the ballot on election day.

Sam E. Van Vactor, representing a number of property owners in the district, replied to Mr. McMenamin, contending that the law makes provision for writing in the name of any person he desires to vote for by any legal elector, and that such is the constitutional right of every citizen in this country, and that it cannot be taken away from him by any election canvassing board.

Mr. Van Vactor also called upon three property owners in the district, who stood up and made statements that they signed Ed. Logan's names denouncing petition on January 4, 1921, after Secretary Brown had stated that that petition was filed in his office on January 1, which would be ten days before election, which was held on January 11. This would indicate that the nomination of Messrs. Clark and Reitman may yet be called in question.

John H. Lewis, engineer for the district, was present and was called upon for a statement regarding the boundaries of the district. Mr. Lewis showed the boundaries of the district from maps, etc., and answered a number of questions asked by the property owners.

James Carty, who is the owner of some 14,000 acres of land within the district, and who was largely responsible for having the meeting called, asked a number of questions of Mr. Clark, Mr. Brown and Mr. Lewis, and was particularly insistent that the land owners wanted to know why the men they elected to represent them at the elections, were not seated.

Mr. Carty is a pioneer of the district and has been a booster for irrigation for many years. To a representative of the Herald, after the meeting adjourned, Mr. Carty requested that he be quoted as saying that the impression that has gone abroad to the effect that the land owners want to kill the district is not true. "We want the water," he said, "but we want the district handled from now on by the men we have chosen to represent us in the development of the project."

Before the meeting adjourned a demand was made that C. C. Clark and Ed. Reitman resign and allow Minor and Wheelhouse to be seated. Regarding this proposal Mr. Clark stated to the Herald that the directors are under heavy bonds to perform the duties of the office until their successors are legally elected and qualify; that the question has been as to the legality of the recent election, and that the only thing left for the old directors to do is to hold their offices until the matter is finally settled in the courts.

Well! 1920 IS GONE

—And with it has gone our profits, as well as yours. The past year has been a hard one for everyone alike. The farmer and stock-grower had to take immense losses—and so did we.

—WE HAVE TAKEN OURS—Our inventory has been taken and the losses crossed off. We are not going to say how great they have been—they were enough.

—WE ARE GLAD IT IS OVER.

—Every article in this store has been reduced regardless of its first cost, and marked right down to and below its present worth on the markets of the world.

—Let's forget 1920 and get together and push for a successful and prosperous 1921.
