LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

Miss Helen Barratt, who has been spending a week's vacation with her parents, returned to O. A. C. Saturday morning, to resume her studies. Miss Slate spent the week end in Lexington visiting friends.

Mrs. Cowdry left for Cecil Saturday morning to show the boys at the road camp some real cooking.

John Kilkeny was in from his Sand Hollow ranch Saturday and reports lambing well along with a phenomenal degree of success. The percentage is well above 100 and the lambs are fat and fine. Mr. Kilkeny is optimistic about the future of the sheep industry, and he says that he has orders from Montana that yearling ewes are being contracted there at from $8 to $10 per head after shearing delivery.

Dave Hunt came in from Sand Hollow Friday afternoon, reporting the same evening to the ranch, "Too busy to feel around town just now," said Mr. Hunt. They are having a successful lambing season and everything is fine, if only the wind and these market will break loose at a lively rate, he says.

J. J. Frey, who used to drill wells in Morrow county, came out from Portland Friday evening to look around his oil stamping ground for a day or two.

B. H. Thompson, of Wasco, registered at the Patrick Friday evening.

L. A. Hunt returned from Spokane Friday morning, where he attended a meeting of representatives of the Farm Bureau from Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

Mrs. W. B. Barry and little daughter, Betty, visited friends at Portland last week.

Elva Dodge and trucks loaded to the guards with sure enough grapes, made a short stop in Heppner Saturday morning. Sheriff McDuffin and Marshall Cason did not urge them to make an extended visit, and the picking was poor.

W. B. Barratt, state highway commissioner, returned from Portland Thursday morning, in company with the other commissioners. Mr. Barratt recently returned to Portland from an inspection trip over the Pacific highway going as far south as the California line.

Everett Peterson returned from Seattle Thursday evening, where he has been attending the University of Washington since September.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Ayers left for Portland Wednesday morning where they expect to visit for a week or so. Miss Helen Barratt, Miss Violet Corrigan and Jasper Crawford, all students at O. A. C., spent the Easter holidays with friends in Heppner.

William Haylor returned from Portland Wednesday, where he spent several days on business. He brought home a beautiful potted Easter lily as an added attraction to his show window at Easter time.

P. A. Anderson championed a party of high school baseball fans to Boardman-Herndon game, which was the first of the season. Boardman had Ione's southern pitcher, Rocky, in the box and it is said he pitched a phenomenal game—nine innings without a clean hit, conceding only one run, on errors, 1 to 5. Mr. Anderson says there were more than 700 people who saw the game, the gate receipts totaling $352. The weather was perfect. Ole Peterson, Ed Chidsey and the McDuffie boys were P. A.'s champions.

J. W. Beynert left this morning for a business trip to Boise and other Idaho points.

Jack Farris, who underwent an operation for appendicitis recently, is reported improving rapidly and expects soon to be able to return to his home at Ione.

Rev. and Mrs. Stephen Phelps left this morning for Vancouver, Washington, where they expect to spend the summer with their daughter. Dr. Phelps has lately leaving the Federated church as pastor for several months but his advanced age has forced him to give up the work and to go to a lower altitude for the summer.

R. H. Baldoek, division engineer for the state highway commission, came in from La Grande Monday evening and is looking over some changes in the survey on the Hinton creek section of the Oregon-Washington highway.

ALONZO HERNDON

Alonzo Herndon, Atlanta's "millionaire barber," was born a slave. Recently he purchased and equipped a $10,000 house to be used as a day nursery. Herndon was born in 1858 in Walton county, Georgia, and was seven years old when emancipation was proclaimed.

SPOKANE FARM BUREAU MEETING

The farmers of Oregon, Washington and Idaho met in Spokane to hold the first Tri-State Farm Bureau meeting ever held in the northwest. This meeting was very largely attended by Wash. and Idaho people with quite a good many from Oregon. There were several men of particular interest who were in attendance, among them being John H. Howard, president of the National Farm Bureau Federation; the chairman of the livestock marketing committee of the National Farm Bureau, who has been busily engaged in working out a program for the co-operative marketing of livestock; and the chairman of the famous farm bureau national committee of seventeen which has submitted a plan for the co-operative marketing of grain.

These men have all made a splendid impression and the farmers feel very much encouraged in a realization that there is vital force in action to take care of their transportation, finance and marketing problems. About four hundred people, including many business men from Spokane, heard President Howard's address, in which he showed up the fallacy of the farmers depending on the Federal Reserve banks for financial assistance. He pointed out the supreme need in a reduction of the freight rates and the working of the present law which gives to the railroads the same kind of a privilege that was enjoyed by the ship building companies during the war.

This six per cent plus cost of operation is certainly a joke. The statistical department of the American Farm Bureau has proven that there are now engaged by the American railroads, two hundred and seventy-seven thousand more employees than were employed during the period immediately preceding the granting by congress of the six per cent dividend. The railroads admit that they are not hauling as much freight as they were before and no where nearly so many passengers. This is clearly a case of where they do not care what the expense is, so long as they are guaranteed their income. The public pays the bills.

The report of the committee of seventeen on the co-operative marketing of grain was well received. There were many representatives of the Oregon Co-operative Grain Growers association, and Washington Wheat Growers association in attendance. They carefully questioned Mr. Eckhart and all were united in expressing their great appreciation of the investigation of the committee. There is no question but what the Farm Bureau National Grain Growers association will be of great benefit to the farmers of the northwest. The co-operative grain growers association has in the northwest, worked out a contract for the co-operative marketing of grain.

So far as they have gone they may have even a stronger contract than their eastern brothers, however, the committee of seventeen plans for a national financing corporation with a ten million dollar capital stock. The greatest financing company in the world to be owned and operated entirely by the farmers themselves. They also plan for a large exporting organization to handle all the export wheat of the United States with a national sales agency to look after the selling of wheat from the national standpoint.

They expect, if their plan is approved on the 5th day of April, that they will immediately put the five hundred solicitors at work in the middle states to put on a first national organization. The greatest publicity campaign that the United States has ever seen will be put on, showing up the impotence of the present wheat marketing system and the old line grain dealers will certainly be in for an unpleasant session.

Oregon elected to attend the Chicago meeting, Vir Smith, of Wasco; S. P. Thompson, of Pendleton; and George A. Marshall, president of the Oregon State Farm Bureau, of Medford.
