Sugar an Ancient Food.

Sugar is an old food in the Orient. Herodotus tells that the Hindus "obtained honey from reeds or bamboo." There is a wealth of classic lore on bees and honey. In ancient days honey was extensively used in the practice of medicine and our European ancestors so used it. Even as late as two centuries ago they claimed medical virtue for honey, and many interesting recipes are stored away in faded books on medicine.

World's Greatest Runners.

For speed and stamina, we do not believe there are any runners in the world capable of beating the Tarahumara Indians, of whom about 15,000 survive in Mexico. They are in great demand as government couriers, for they are said to be able to cover 170 miles a day on foot, and have been known to run 600 miles in five days.

A KNIGHT

By RACHEL E. BAKER.

(Copyright, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When she was powerless to resist, her parents christened her Priscilla Willoughby. As she grew older her playmates stumbled over the stately name until they shortened it to Pussy, to which someone tacked Willow, and Pussy Willow she had been from that time to all her friends. But Priscilla was not thinking of her name today as she faced her room of sixty first-graders.

"I am going to try another nature lesson today," she said, and before her mind's eye rose a vision of her last attempt. The geranium had quite unexpectedly put forth a pink bud and she had attempted to show her class the beauty of it, quite forgetting the pretty green smock and pink tie that she herself had worn.

"I am thinking of something that is very beautiful," she had said.

"Yes," the class beamed in sympathy. "You have all seen it before at school." They were not quite sure.

"You can see it today," continued the teacher, remembering that sometimes she put it on a shelf in the back of the room.

Yes they could see it today all right. "It is beautiful and part of it is a lovely green"—a chorus of lifted hands interrupted her—"and right in the center of it is a dainty bit of pink..."

Every hand shot into the air at that, and as one voice they had shouted, "Miss Willoughby's waist!"

Sixty little faces glowed up at her. Rosy from recent washing, they somehow reminded her of cherubs, and again of very precious little cups into which she was to pour the wine of knowledge.

"Now, this morning I want you to put your thinking caps on. Remember to tie them carefully under your chins. Last Tuesday we talked about the geranium." All eyes sought the window, then turned to consider Miss Willoughby, but, no, she wasn't wearing the green smock this morning.

"I want you all to look carefully at my dress. I am going to tell you about something that is just the same color as my dress."

They eyed it appreciatively. "Is it silk?" queried Rebecca Slovisky. "Can I feel it?"

"Yes," consented Miss Willoughby, "because the thing I am going to tell of is just as soft as my dress. I will walk slowly up the aisle and each of you may put your hand on my dress."

"Please, Miss Willoughby, Johnny squashed a chocolate in his hand," announced Katie Flannagan, trembling for the precious dress.

Johnnie admitted his guilt, and his little face looked so unhappy that to prevent the shower she saw impending there, Miss Willoughby sent him off to the lavatory whence he soon returned, and relief settled upon the class once more.

All were ready for the great adventure and Miss Willoughby walked slowly down each aisle. Timidly the little hands went out to touch the beautiful dress, and great joy swelled each breast as they patted the soft fabric with their little starchy hands. Miss Willoughby took her place in front of the class.

"Who can tell me something about the dress?"

"It's silk," asserted Rebecca, Teacher acknowledged it.

"It's soft as my kitty," murmured Johnnie, thinking out loud.

"It's very much like your kitty, and it lies out in the woods. It's just the color of my dress, and it's just as soft as my dress. Can you tell me what it is?"

"Yes, Miss Willoughby, I got some just like your dress but it was a long ways."

His perspiring face mutely questioned if this were good or evil in her sight, and his right little hand slowly disclosed before her astonished gaze five little pussy willows, crumpled as to fur, bereft of their brown sheaf but still pussy willows.

"Where did you get them?"

"Down by Miller's River," her face grew white, "and I slipped in the mud and most fell in, but I crept back on my hands and knees, and I got them for you." His adoring eyes rested on her face.

A wise teacher does not kiss a gentleman of six, even if he has risked his life for her, and if her hand rested more caressingly than usual upon his sturdy little shoulder, Johnnie did not know it.

PREACHER IS MANY SIDED

Chautauqua Speaker is All Around Man.

James Hardin-Smith is a real home-to-oodness man's man. He not only holds down the job of preaching to a great metropolitan church with its multitude of activities, but has found time for participation in civic affairs and fraternal orders. He travels extensively, he is a great student and spends his summers on the Chautauqua platform. He is one of the leading inspirational lecturers in Chautauqua work and will this year appear at the local assembly where he will deliver his most famous address, "Taste the Apples." This deals with the broad human qualities of optimism, patriotism and character building. It has something for every man and woman and boy and girl. Delivered as Hardin-Smith does it, it is bound to be long remembered and have a solid influence in bettering all who hear it.

BELIEVES IN HARD WORK. Noted Orator on "Fiddles and Fortunes."

Thornton A. Mills, distinguished son of a famous family of orators and public servants, is a believer in the efficacy of hard work. Most of the world's public and private troubles will be solved he thinks when men and women begin to really work honestly again—when people work for the joy of the job rather than the size of the pay check.

Giant Telegraph System.

According to the United States bureau of the census there are 21 telegraph companies operating in this country, with a total pole line of 241,012 miles and 1,888,703 miles of single wire. More than 150,000,000 messages are transmitted each year. For the convenience of customers 28,805 offices are scattered over the country. A total of 30,000 employees receive salaries amounting to nearly $40,000,000 annually.

Potash Discovered in Japan.

Potassium salts, used as a basis in the manufacture of glass and soap, have been recently discovered in nearly all of the numerous salt wells in Szechuan Province, China, which range in depth from 1,000 to 3,000 feet, states an issue of Finance and Commerce.

Artificial Limbs.

Artificial arms and legs were, it is believed, used in Egypt as early as 700 B. C. It is said they were made by the priests, who were the physicians and surgeons of these days in the land of the Nile, and the limbs were well constructed.
