Blind People Good Gardeners. Blind men make good gardeners, says Mrs. Muscombe of London, founder of the Guild of Blind Gardeners, who was a enthusiastic gardener before her sight began to fail. "I can tell different flowers quite easily by the sense of touch," she said. Miss D. Brown, who is interested in the guild, quotes the experience of a blind gardener she employed who could tell different types of roses by touch alone, where to other people would be the chief guide.

MORE FINE MEAT GOES TO PORTLAND MARKET

Eight cars of fine, fat stock went out from the local yards Sunday morning bound for the Portland market, consisting of several cars of cattle and one car of lambs. The shippers were:

C. A. Minor, Heppner, 1 car lambs.

Carl Ballance, Ritter, 2 cars cattle.

Beattie Burton, Bear Valley, 2 cars cattle.

Joe Beck, Bear Valley, 3 cars cattle.

The stock was all exceptionally fine being in prime condition and stockmen predict that the cattle should bring an average of 5 cents.

C. A. Minor, who sent in what is said to be the best lot of lambs shipped from here this season, expected about $5.00 a head for them, while, he said, a first-class fat two-year-old weather would go begging in the same market at $3.50.

Mr. Minor tells of sending in a shipment of cattle a short time ago, among which was a scrubby Jersey calf, which he said a self-respecting cowman would not eat, that brought $22 and in the same lot was a fine, fat, young cow weighing 1200 pounds which brought $24.

Mr. Minor says there is something wrong somewhere when such conditions prevail but whether the fault lies with the consuming public or the market manipulators, he has not yet discovered. He is one optimistic sheepman, however, and is confident that everything will come out all right yet. There are relatively speaking but a few sheep left in the United States as compared with a few years ago, Mr. Minor says, and because of that the industry is bound to come back, pronto.

LEGION BOYS HOLD MOST SUCCESSFUL SMOKER

"A fine time was enjoyed by all." is the best way to describe the American Legion smoker held at the Fair Pavilion Saturday evening. It was a hot tamala every minute and the numerous wrestling and boxing bouts nearly all got good hands and the participants were accorded much praise. The evening started off with a number of good preliminaries in which young Vic Groshen and Elmer Bucknum easily starred. The two kids put up a scrap that was worth the entire price of admission, going two fast and furious rounds to a draw. Nick Gentry and Ralph Moore two other youthful aspirants for Jack Dempsey's fame and fortune also put on a pretty scrap which also ended in a draw and the Johnson Bros. of Lexington, put on a neat exhibition sparring match that was clever. Wright and Sutherland went 3 rounds to a victory for Wright. Eads and Gilmore went to a draw in three rounds.

The principal events of the evening was a wrestling match between Norton Winnard, of Eugene, and Harvey Bauman, of Lexington. Both these men are locally well known and favorite wrestlers and the 10-minute-round which resulted in a draw was a fine exhibition of strength and skill. Roy Wakefield and Stewart Valentine went a four round boxing bout which resulted in a victory for Valentine but it was a hot one for all that. The members of the Legion were all well pleased with the affair and added the neat sum of $140 to their building fund chest.

HERE'S SOME BEAR STORY

Here is a bear story that was published in the hotel column of the Oregonian the other day that does not need to take a back seat in any company. C. H. Chick, who tells the story, is the father of Dr. C. C. Chick of this city: An exceptional collection of bear stories is the property of Charles H. Chick, a local timber operator. One of the best in the collection dates back in 1879 when Chick was logging in the Michigan woods well up on the Pierre Marquette river. Henry Flynn ran the camp and had about 40 men on his crew. Mrs. Flynn had their charming daughter, Kitty, a child of about three years of age, were also residents of the head camp. Flynn had some men cutting grass for hay in a bottom meadow and each noon was in the habit of fishing out and taking lunch to them. Kitty would make the trip with her daddy, perched on the horse behind his back. One evening on Flynn's return, Kitty was missed and the entire crew went out on the search, armed with guns, pans, horns and other means of making a noise. When they found the place where she had left the road and near-by were the tracks of a large bear. Indian trackers were called to their aid for the loggers feared that the bear had killed the child. The following day the Indians found the bear and the little girl together, and at their shouts the big animal dropped the child and fled. Kitty afterwards told how the bear kept her warm through the night and carried her for miles through the brush.

For several weeks after the rescue the bear came down to the camp each night, and seemed to be looking for Kitty. The Indians thought that it must have been a mother bear who lost her cubs. The Chicks had Kitty as their guest many years later at a small town near the place where she was stolen by the bear. Kitty likely has children of her own, who have now outgrown their terrors in hearing of the bear that stole mother.

HOME BREWERS AND DISTILLERS PROTECTED BY CONGRESS

Kitchen brewers of beer and cellar distillers of "white mule" were given ample protection by congress the other day when by a vote of 96 to 54 prohibition agents were virtually prohibited from interfering with the manufacture of alcoholic beverages in private dwellings unless proof can be furnished that the liquor is being manufactured for sale. The bill as passed by the senate prohibits, under heavy penalties, search or seizure by prohibition agents without warrants and no warrants are to be issued without proof that liquor is being manufactured for sale or sold. For some reason Representative Voistead, recognized leader of the drys voted for the measure.
