BUSINESS MEN DEMAND MUCH FROM EMPLOYEES

Some Qualities That Applicant for a Job Had to Show in a Character Test.

A New Yorker who, for reasons of delicacy, must be nameless, was recently gratified with a tempting offer of employment.

The firm which sought his services required from him a scientific character reading by an expert. He was referred to a local psycho-analyst retained by the concern.

The expert rated him high on latent ability, but deficient in the essential business qualities of "self-esteem and selfishness."

He did not get the job, says Leslie's. "Sorry," he was told, "but your character shows there isn't enough iron in your makeup."

Ho, for the good old days when a man was still an "ornery cuss" and generosity was yet respectable. Time was when a man's kindness recommended him for a job and gave him reasonable hopes of advancement. Now, a growing number of employers insist that his worth be weighed in advance with a pair of apothecary's scales and gauged with a machinist's micrometer. And woe to him if the acute psycho-detective discerns in him a tendency to meekness or human sympathy! He suffers the heaviest business vices of modesty and unselfishness!

How deeply, we wonder, have the doctrines of these latter-day prophets penetrated the collective business mind of the country at large? Must the model citizen who listens dutifully on a Sunday morning to a sermon on the brotherhood of man hurry home to a learned treatise on how to despise his neighbor?

What a theme for G. K. Chesterton—or Nietzsche!

RECALL FATE OF FRANKLIN

Interesting Relics Recently Brought to Vancouver From the Land Where He Perished.

After being in the possession of the tacitly natives of King William's land for three-quarters of a century, a large number of interesting relics of the ill-fated Sir John Franklin polar expedition have been brought from the frozen north by Joe Benard, who is here after a four years' stay along the northernmost coast of the North American continent, says a Vancouver (B. C.) dispatch.

Though priceless from a collector's point of view, the utilitarian value of the relics is negligible, and they were obtained by Benard for a piece of lumber worth possibly 20 cents on the coast.

A few brass buttons among the relics are believed to have belonged to the distinguished leader, though there is as yet no positive proof of this.

Benard also obtained a number of primitive scientific instruments used by the northern tribes. These will be sold to various museums and universities for which the explorer has been collecting ethnological specimens and data since 1910. He also brought a collection of furs worth approximately $25,000.

Sir John Franklin, with 154 companions, sailed into the Arctic in 1845 to find the northwest passage, and was never heard of again. After many relief expeditions had failed, his fate was ascertained in 1853, when bleached skeletons were found on the trail to Hudson bay.

Gare of the Rifle.

The sergeant of marines was instructing his men on the care of small arms, says an item in Our Navy. "The rifle is the marine's best friend," he said. "He must never neglect it. He must treat it as he treats his wife and wipe it over with an oily rag twice a day."

FIRST LOVE STILL LINGERS

John Burroughs Has Vivid Recollections of the Little Maid Who Won His Heart.

John Burroughs' recollections of his first sweetheart are as fresh and rose tinted as the cheeks of the little lady as she ran down the hill to play with her ardent young admirer of five. "Uncle John tells about her in 'John Burroughs, Boy and Man,' the semi-autobiography which is written by his friend, Dr. Clara Barrus.

"I can see her now, as she came running down the hill from the school-house, the cape of her little pink sun-bonnet fluttering in the breeze," said Mr. Burroughs as he pointed out the course she took down the road to her home.

"I must have been between five and six years old. I had gone over to neighbor Bartram's in the West settlement with father on a stoneboat drawn by the oxen. Father probably went there to help him draw stones for a new piece of wall—they used to exchange work in that way.

"I can hear her father's voice as he sent it over the hills to the school-house—he had a prodigious voice—'Eleanor, come home!' And soon she came flying down the road to play with me.

"We played by the barn on a little mound of hay. I remember we made a nest there—I can see her now as she took a wisp of hay and puffed it together, making believe it was an egg, and that she was a hen—I can see the sharp angles of the slanting hay as she tried to shape it like an egg before she covered it in the nest."

France and Scotland Once Allies.

French influence is very marked in a number of Scotch words, which is not very surprising in view of the fact that from the early part of the fourteenth century until the accession of James VI to the English throne, France and Scotland were allies.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN KING

But for the war this young man might have been now the ruler of Bavaria. He is the former Prince of Liechtenstein, who was heir apparent to the throne.

A Useful Fish.

They have a remarkable fish in Nova Scotia. It is known as the great fish, because it can be frozen solidly but if placed in water it soon thaws out and swims around as vigorously as ever. The natives, we are told, use this fish in making ice cream. The fish is caught, frozen and placed in the cream. In thawing out it freezes the cream and its movements at the same time heat the mixture, making it nice and smooth. It is a fresh water fish, but the story requires a lot of salt.
