DEVINE REPORTS ON ELECTION

bushels. One director pooling only 475 bushels of wheat.

I do not consider these men as having sufficient interest at stake to put forth the best efforts for the good of the association. How many men are there—men whom we call farmers—who could pool 10,000 bushels and up, men whom we want and need in the association who are going to pool their wheat in an association governed by men who have such small interest at stake?

Another objection to the methods of business is this: At the opening of the meeting the President of Delegation acting chairman, called the attention of the organization to the fact that owing to the difficulties we have had to finance the association, the bankers thought the same directors should be re-elected. They considered it unwise to get new faces on the board claiming it would make it more difficult to obtain financial aid.

I disagreed, giving as my reason that to keep up the high standard of efficiency, to progress and avoid ruts and repetition of mistakes, we should have at least some new timber for our board each year, changes that would produce new and progressive ideas.

However the old board were all re-elected excepting Mr. Buchanan, and Mr. Downing representing 1,211 bushels. (Mr. Downing was not sufficiently interested to attend this meeting.) It seemed to me that this is again establishing a custom we are fighting to get away from, dictation by the bankers, speculators etc.

After the election of the directors, J. E. Reynolds was elected as president of the board of delegates and was asked to meet each time with the board of directors to represent the delegates, this being his second term. This man put 301 bushels of wheat through the pool. About half as many bushels as he receives dollars from the association for his attendance at these meetings. If his office is necessary, which I doubt, it should be filled by a wheat grower, not a 300 bushel producer!

I may not have made my meaning clear but these two points I have tried to bring out. That Morrow county does not have adequate representation for the amount of wheat produced. That the business of the association is too great to be in the control of men who have not sufficient personal interest to work for the interests of the association as a whole.

Representation away from production means away from good business; away from good business means the weakening of the foundation of the association. I have been promised a copy of the minutes of the last meeting but so far have failed to receive it.

derably the best of it. He landed on Charlie with a terrible force, sending him to the ropes where he hung for a space as the undecided as to what to do next and a dispute which arose just then regarding the referee gave him time to regain his wind and poise. The second round was Dexter's but in the third Fitz again took up his rush tactics and succeeded in putting Jake out for the count.

Dexter had 30 pounds the better of Fitzmaurice in weight but his over weight and lack of training more than offset that advantage. Heppner sports were pretty well pleased with the big fellow's work, considering his condition and will willingly back him to the limit if he will take on some intensive training and get in condition.

The Round-Up features which were managed by Lloyd Matteson and George Sperry, furnished lots of sport for the crowds and some good exhibitions were given. Matteson, who captured the first prize at the Heppner Round-Up last fall, was put out of business by a dislocated ankle early in the game and George Sperry took first prize in the contests.

The dances given in the big pavilion each evening drew big crowds of merry-makers, the music being furnished by Glasses orchestra, of Vancouver, Washington.

A. L. Ayers and Mrs. Ayers returned from Portland Saturday. Mrs. McCullough has returned from Portland where her brother, Paul Hisler, recently underwent a serious operation for an affection of the arm which has been troubling him for several months. He is reported to be improving rapidly since the operation.

Cecil Llewallen, state highway traffic officer, was here from Pendleton a few days during the week looking after official duties. Cecil spent a day or two at Baker while the big pioneer pageant was on and narrowly escaped arrest on a charge of being a traffic cop, which, in the eyes of the pageant officials was almost as heinous a crime as wearing a white collar.

E. A. Poe, who farms in the country north of Ione, was a business visitor in town Friday morning and says harvesting was about on in his district. Some fields, Mr. Poe says, will make 30 bushels or better while others are not so good. He estimates that the crop will average less than last year.

The people of this country, through an act of congress, signed by President Wilson, established a tribunal to decide such disputes over wages and working conditions, which are submitted to it in a proper manner. It is the decision of this tribunal against which the shop crafts are striking.
