

DESIGNERS GIVE THOUGHT TO PRETTY TUB FROCKS

"PORCH DRESSES," "morning dresses" and "wash dresses" are all descriptive terms that undertake to fix the character of practical tub-frocks for summer wear. Designers are giving a great deal of time and thought to them and are being repaid by an increasing demand; for tub-frocks have grown prettier and more interesting all the time. Since they began using organdie, dotted swiss, or voile with the heavier cottons, women have shown their appreciation of the dainty note introduced by these diaphanous goods and they are wearing simple, cotton dresses everywhere. "Wash dress" is a very broad title and even the summer party frocks of organdie may be included under this head.

In gingham the big demand has been for checks, most of them small, showing a color and white. They have been made up with white organdie in so many different ways that we hardly think of one without the other. A green and white checked gingham, with bands of white organdie, shown at the left of the two wash dresses pictured, is very neatly made and is as pretty as can be. A very open green and white braid overlays the narrow inserted bands of organdie and these bands trim the collar and cuffs and divide the overcross into four panels. The collar and cuffs, girdle and bodice, and two wide bands at the top of the overskirt, are cut on the bias of the gingham and bias bindings of it finish all edges. Two

Crab Shells as Barometers.

The Arancians of the southernmost province of Chile use a crab shell as a barometer. In dry, fair weather it is white, but when rain is approaching red spots appear on it, and when excessive moisture is present in the atmosphere it becomes red all over.—Indianapolis News
