Mr. and Mrs. Ben Swaggart were interested visitors at the Rodeo last week where Mr. Swaggart had a couple of fine horses taking part in the thoroughbred races.

M. and Mrs. J. W. Stevens were in town Wednesday and Thursday last week where Mr. Stevens had a couple of fine horses taking part in the thoroughbred races.

Miss Mildred Stevens left Thursday morning for Bellingham, Wash., where she will attend the Washington State Normal school the coming year. Mrs. Stevens, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stevens, will visit her friend, Miss Midge Osborne, at The Dalles, before proceeding to Bellingham.

J. T. Lienallen, democratic candidate for representative for the 22nd district, was a visitor in Heppner during the Rodeo last week and was active in meeting voters and stating his position in the campaign. Mr. Lienallen is a real "dirt farmer," a class that represents about 85 per cent of the population of this district, and those who know him best declare that if elected he will represent the interests of that class, upon whose prosperity rests the prosperity and welfare of the country.

CECIL

With due deference to the readers and families of Cecil who have suffered a sad bereavement during the week the Cecil items will not appear.

I have no wish to write an obituary regarding Mrs. Henriksen, of Cecil, who passed into the Great Beyond at Portland Sanitarium on September 25, 1922, and was buried at Mt. Scott cemetery on September 29. Archdeacon Rev. C. B. Van Waters of Oregon conducted the burial services. I have known the deceased lady since she first came amongst us and found her a lady of sterling qualities, ever ready and willing at any time to sympathize and help all those in trouble and also join in with all our merry doings. Beloved and sadly missed by all of us. A devoted wife and mother. Our deepest sympathies are extended to the sorrowing family and—

Since she would no longer stay To be with those she loved, We trust they may all meet again In that bright world above.

Be strong— We are not here to play, to dream, to drift, We have hard work to do and loads to lift. Shun not the struggle, face it; It's God's gift.

In sympathy, A CECIL FRIEND

WHAT THEY ARE WEARING IN KNITTED GARMENTS

THERE are such regions and armies of knitted garments that if one were asked "what they are wearing," the answer might be "everything," and be truthful. But interest is still centered on sweaters and scarves and there are some refreshing novelties to report in these two most important items that will interest every woman. Sweaters or scarves, with hats to match, made of wool or silk yarns are worn with plain and inconspicuous skirts. These skirts are mostly white or white with a pin stripe or small cross-bar in black. Any color in the matched set looks well with them and the ensemble has no rival that is prettier for out-dooring. Many of the hats are crocheted, others made of the knitted silk fabric used for the scarf as in the pretty set shown here.

Just now, white sweaters are in favor, knitted with lace stitches. Iceland wool or silk and wool combined, resembling Iceland, are used for them and they are made in both the Tuxedo and slip-on styles. Names conveying an idea of their sheer and delicate quality have been discovered for them and we find such terms as "organie wool" and "grenadine knit" in the parlance of the sweater manufacturers. Fine yarn knitted in close sweater-stitch, is varied by horizontal, figured stripes in slip-on sport sweaters, that have proved popular. One of them is pictured here. They usually display a white, tan or beige background with stripes in two or more colors. Very handsome sweaters of this kind are decorated with cross-stitch embroidery massed in one place, as on a broad hip band. Knitted dresses and suits cannot be overlooked. One suit of navy wool with plain skirt and slip-on jacket has a wide, standing collar of looped silk, which also makes the cuffs and bands on the bottom of the jacket and skirt. Very practical wool sweaters for little folks are knitted of bright colored yarns in weights varying to suit the time of the year. They are usually plain and closely knit, in either slip-on or open styles, and they form a part of every little girl's belongings from those of the little two-year-old to "flapperettes."

TO AID DISABLED VETERANS Col. Robert U. Patterson of Medical Division of Bureau Gives Time to the Afflicted.

After serving in seventeen expeditions in the Philippines in 1898, later going with the Cuban army of pacification, taking charge of a base hospital in England in 1917, going to the front with the British expeditionary forces and being on duty with our own famous Second division during the hardest fighting north-west of Chateau Thierry, Col. Robert U. Patterson is now back in peaceful Washington with the task of looking after the medical end of the work of the veterans' bureau.

Under the supervision of Colonel Patterson, the medical division of the bureau has been completely reorganized and is doing everything possible to alleviate the suffering of the disabled World War veterans. Of course, he is an ardent worker in the George Washington Post No. 1, at Washington.

SOLVED GERMAN RADIO SPEED Operators' Ingenuity in Use of Dictaphone Aided in Intercepting Code Messages.

On a bench in the Bois de Boulogne, in company with mademoiselle, or in rumbling or crawling toward the Boche's trench, the American dough-boy couldn't be equalled for speed. When it came time, however, to pass secret radio messages, where no particular danger was involved either for the sender or the receiver, the Germans seemed to be able to make it a trifle snappier.

The foregoing is apropos of the statement that German code messages were sent so fast that radio operators of the allies, who weren't supposed to be playing, anyway, were not able to take them. It was not long, though, until what the allied operators lacked in speed they made up in ingenuity. A certain operator, by the triangulation method, found that messages were being sent from a station in Germany to another in German East Africa.

After several weeks of work, this operator took a dictaphone to his station and set the blank wax cylinder in motion at a rapid rate of speed while a German message was on its way to Africa. After the message had been "caught" in the wax cylinder the cylinder was placed on a transcribing machine and then run so slowly that the mysterious dots and dashes would

PLANS FOR THE "NEXT WAR" Military Training Camps Association to Open School to Civilians to Prepare Officers.

If the association which Henry J. Reilly is now promoting proves as successful as the organization which he helped to form in Paris a few years ago, there will be no scarcity of competent officers for the "next war." Mr. Reilly is now working out plans for the Military Training Camps association for the training of officers. After serving as a brigadier general during the World War, he finished his overseas work by helping form the American Legion in Paris.

The military training camps are open to civilians who feel the need of regular training, regular hours and an abundance of exercise. Mr. Reilly has acquired National Service, the association's official magazine. He expects to consolidate this magazine with the Army and Navy Journal of which he is now editor.

Carrying On With the American Legion

Various units of the Auxiliary have now adopted every ward in the war hospital at Oteen, N. C. The last "orphan" ward was taken over by the women of Sitka, Alaska.

A proposed reduction in the salaries of the school teachers of Seattle, Wash., was protested at once by the American Legion there as being a bad thing for the public schools.

By keeping tabs on alien slackers applying for naturalization, the Legion post at Spencer, Ia., has, it reports, "kept several yellow individuals from becoming American citizens."

The camp for disabled ex-soldiers of Minnesota, located on the shores of Lake Minnetonka, is under the management of the American Legion and the Minneapolis Council of Social Agencies. The camp was formerly conducted through the summer season by the veterans' bureau.

How Many Will Give One Dollar?

WALTER M. PIERCE is making a gallant fight, almost single handed, to be elected Governor of Oregon. He has no funds to pay the expenses of his campaign. The issue he makes is reduced taxes, and he promises, if elected to use every power vested in the Governor to lessen the taxation that now rests so heavily upon the backs of the people.

No powerful corporations are behind Pierce; nobody but the plain people. His election depends upon them alone. Don't you feel it your duty to help him in his worthy fight by contributing One Dollar to his expenses? It isn't much for any one to give, but there are many plain people, and if you help a little the battle will be won. It will make a clean campaign and elect a clean man.

Please send your dollar today, together with your name and address, and the contribution will be acknowledged by return mail.
