STEVE PERKINS AT STAR

Steve Perkins had a bright idea. He would borrow Percy Jones' wife. The inspiration back of this happy thought was caused by the fact that in order for Steve to acquire his inheritance he had to be either forty-four or married, and Steve's mother, and the plot was hatched and Winnie Jones introduced to Steve's Aunt Sarah, the guardian of the family treasury, as Mrs. Stephen Perkins. So far, so good. In fact, it was immense—but Aunt Sarah took a great liking to Winnie, and dragged her and her "hubby" off to a little cottage in the country. Of course Percy Jones had to trail along; he wasn't going to let his own bride out his sight if he knew it.

Then, to make matters even more interesting, it develops that living right next door was Major Whitman and his daughter Ruth, the latter being the young lady that Steve was violently in love with. Aunt Sarah thinks she suspects an "affair" between Percy Jones and Winnie; in fact, she is sure of it, and she makes up her mind—and when Aunt Sarah's mind is made up—good night! The more Auntie tries to straighten out matters, the more mixed up things become, and at the end the only way out is to tell the truth.

The above is a faint idea of O. Moore's latest, Schenck Pictures, "The Chicken in the Case," which will be shown at the Star Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday and it is estimated that this famous comedian was never funnier than in the role of Steve Perkins. Victor Heppner both wrote and directed the picture, and it is said to be funnier than his last production, "The Poor Stamp," which was the season's comedy hit. Today Sampson, Katherine Perry, Vivian Onden and Edgar Nelson have the supporting roles.
