ATTAILITATE A

Copyright 1922 by Sidney Gowing

(Continued from page three)

The chauffeur, who was a middleaged man with a singularly wooden expression, seemed to be making a mental effort. He saluted, staring straight before him.

"Goodby, Georgina! Bloss you, my child; bless you! Drive on, Grundle.

What are you walting for?" The car meandered out of Scroope park and turned northward along the main read. Georgina was in low spirits. Almee throughout had been seething with an enormously increased sense of mutiny, and, as they neared the station, she exploded.

"I can't stand it, Georgie!" "I wish I were you!" said Georgina

mournfully. "I wish I were Almee Scroope, and | aloney on my way to Jerranix abbey. That's Almee started slightly. An extraorher eyes. Georgina, who knew the sign of old, looked at her nervously.

"You are!" said Almee, in a voice of unlooked-for decision. "What on earth do you mean?"

Aimee gripped her by the arm, and replied, in a low voice that bubbled with excitement.

"My dear, fut cousin, your full name, as I remember, is Georgina Amy Scroope Berners! Lop off the superfluous head and taff, and there you are-Amy Scroope. Near enough for anyone. You are going to Jervaulx Instead of me! Aunt Erythea has never seen me, nor has Alexander Lambe. And neither of them know you from Adam-I mean Eve! You'll sult them down to the ground!"

Georgina looked at her with dawning terror.

"It is a gorgeous arrangement!" exclaimed Almee, tightening her grip on her consin's arm. "And nothing easier. Unde Joseph will never miss you-leave me to fix that up. "Grandle will deliver you at Jerraulx; he's a perfect supersisted, and has probably forgotten which of us is to go there, if we didn't tell him. He never talks, either. As for me, I shall go to Seabridge, or on a walking tour-or anything I choose?

"Almee, are you mad?"
"It is one of the samest mements of my life!" retorted Almee; and, leaning over the back, she tore the taglabels off her luggage and Georgina's. and scattered them on the road, "You can take my things with you!"

"If you think for a moment I'd have anything to do with such a business-" A flendish expression came over Aimee's features. She gripped her cousin's arms again. "If you don't," she hissed, "Til tell everybody about you and Aloysius getting lost at the ruridecanal plenic!"

At this monstrous accusation, Georgina blushed scarlet. The mildest peccadillo in a blameless life, the memory of the incident in question always filled her with alarm; Aimee had held it over her head before.

"I won't listen to another word!" she gasped.

"You needn't. It is the time for deeds!" Aimee seized a small square box from among the luggage and thumped the chauffeur on the back. "Grundle, stop here! I have only a bag, I'll walk up to the station approach. Take Miss Berners on to Jervaulx. And hurry-she is behind time already

A faintly bewillered expression passed over the chauffeur's face, as though he were trying to arrange his ideas. He rubbed his ear for a moment, then saluted and let in the clutch.

Georgina, who had risen with the intention of escaping from the car, lost her balance and collapsed in a slightly undignified menner on the

She struggled up and turned flushed face towards her cousin.

"Stop! Stop!" she cried, in an agonized voice. "Almee "Good-by, dear!" said Aimee, waving her handkerchief. "Don't get lost with Alexander!' The car bore the speechless and gesticulating Georgina out of sight round the bend. Aimee sat down on her box. buried her face in her hands, and dissolved into such unfeeling hughter that a pair of thrushes and a chaffinch fiel from the bedge in indignation and

. Onward through the green lanes and over the county border the car carried a limp and nerveless Georgina. Consternation had given away

"What shall I do?" she thought. "What am I to say to Lady Erythen? There'll be a fearful row!"

to numb despute.

Georgina racked her brains for a way out of the difficulty. There seemed to be none. She lay back exnusted. And so perverse is even the purest of bumns taineds that a faint omiesion crept into Georgina's-a little whisper, as it were, in that fameless ear-diat it would be peculturfy delightful if she could fill the are that Aimee had impped out for Georgina started, and thrust the idea from her with horrified selfreproach. Again she sought for an explanation—a true one—which would save Almee's face. By the time she and considered and rejected balf a dozen, finally deciding on one that she thought might do, the car had covered the thirty miles and was thread ing through the park road of Jer-

Georgina stumbled out of the car at the main entrance and faced a gaunt and majestic indy in gray sill; who came down the steps.

"And so, my dear Almee," safe Lady Erythen, in a large and inform ntive voice, "you arrive at last. We!

Georgina faltered. Everything she bad intended to say was driven out of her head. Almee had been prophetic-Aunt Erythea was very like the duke of Weilington.

"Lady Erythea!" gasped Georgina. as two men-servants came to unload the luggage. "There is-there is a mistake! May I-"

"The modern tendency of the young to enunciate indistinctly," said Lady Erythea, producing an ear-trumpet, "always annoys me. Say what you have to say clearly."

Georgina had not realized that Lady Erythen was extremely deaf. "There is something I have to explain," she bawled hearsely into the ear-trumpet. "P-please, can I see you

"An?" sold Lady Eryther vaguely, "I am pleased that you look forward so much to your wisit. No, you need dinary implsh expression came into not fear being alone. Here is your Georgina Faltered.

cousin," she added, as a young man in clerical collar came out upon the "Alexander, your cousin,

Georgina turned a pale and timid face to the stranger. The Rev. and

Hon. Alexander Lambe bowed. Alexander was large and well, though somewhat loosely, built. Almee's epithet, "owl-faced," was hardly fair. Certainly his clean-shaven face was a little serious, and his eyes large and round, but very kindly.

"Welcome to Jervaulx, Cousin Almee," he said. A sudden interest and sympathy quickened in the large eyes as they rested on Georgina's face. And the panic-stricken girl's fear died within her. Mr. Alexander Lambe looked so cool and protective and dependable. "Escort your cousin to the morning room, Alexander," said Lady Erythen authoritatively, "and offer her refreshment after her drive," They walked in together. And as they walked their backs seemed to suggest, in some subtle manner, that an understanding, a mutual sympathy. had dawned between them. Backs can be very expressive sometimes.

Lady Erythea regarded them with a look of commanding approval. She followed them majestically up the

"This," proclaimed Lady Erythea's erect and overwhelming back, "is as I ordained it from the beginning."

CHAPTER III

Re-Enter Billy.

Almee tramped along the broad highway, whistling. At Scroope, much more at Jervaulx, one was not allowed to whistle. Ever and anon she stopped whistling to laugh.

Aimee had dropped the square box continued on her way unburdened The idea of anding lodgings at Seabridge appealed to her, funds enough. A month's pocket money was in her purse, and Lady Scroope had been liberal on her de-

"What a row there'll be," chuckled Aimee, "if Georgie doesn't play up! I don't care. I gave them my uiti matum. They can't hang me. I've station. been very patient with them all. One must make a stand sometime or other Who does my life belong to," demanded Almee, never a purist in gram-

A faint sound was borne upon the speeding along the road with a smear tall of a comet. Almee recognized the Flying Sphinx, and became aware of a laughing face looking up at hers. and a set of very white teeth,

"Why, it's Billy!" she cried spon-"Hello, old chap!" cried the cyclist.

Billy was bare-headed, his fair hair sticking up at the crown in a little tuft that blow about in the wind, "Where were you making for?" he

"The unemployment bureau!" retorted Aimee flippuntly.

Billy's face expressed concern. "I suppose you're guying me. You A FULL CAR LOAD OF POULTRY don't mean you've lost your Joh?"

"Job?" Aimee bubbled with amuse ment, "Well, I had a job ull ready for me this morning. But it's washed out. I've tost it. And now I'm adrift." Billy was perplexed. He had been wholly unable to place Aimee. He wondered if she were a governess. A question was on his lips, but he checked himself for fear of glying of-

"Lost it?" he exclaimed. "I guess it's just as well! You look a heap necessity. None better than THE happier! What job d'you think of WINCHESTER. We have all sizes chasin'?"

"I-I don't know."

Billy looked at her eagerly. A sud den flash came into his eyes, as one who conceives a superb idea, a brain-wave!" "What do you mean?"

"Go shares with me!" "Shares?" echoed Aimee. She was Bisbee's? conscious of a curious little thrill. "Share what?"

"See here!" said Billy, eyeing her keenly. "When we were doing fifty. Water turns the wheel; money turns five on the Sphinx, you never wilted- the business; it don't turn. Creditors never turned a hair!" "Of course not. It was gergeous," please take notice, He came nearer, intensely earnest. "Know anything about motor engines?" he said quickly, Tve often taken down the old bus at home, on a wet day, and reassembled it."

"Where was that?" "At the place where I had a job," sald Aimee

"Great?" he cried. "You're the thing I've been looking for all these months. Now, listen to the brain-wave. I'm over here to sell the Sphinx. There's a big deal on in London. But what I want's a quiet spot where I can develop some of the gadgets with no crooks around to steal 'em. Get me?' "Yes, go on," said Almee, cutching ds enthusiasm. "I'm heading now for a fittle town called Stanhoe, thirty miles south of ere. Stanboe's quiet as the tomb, I've struck it before. There's an old mili I b'lleve I can get held of, and fit up as a garage and workshop—" "Yes, I see!" suid Almee eagerly.

"Come on into it with me-come to Stanboe!" said Billy explosively, "You'll catch on to the Flying Sphinx in a minute, an' then popularize her as a lady's mount! The finest mount for a girl ever put on the market. There isn't one yet. You can do It! You've got the nerve-an' the grit! I'll teach you to tend an' drive her.

Will you come?" "Will a duck swim!" cried Aimee. "Of course I'll come!"

"Fine!-partner!" cried Billy, flinging out a big brown hand. Almee took it, and received a shake that bruised her fingers. "Take your perch, old chap!" said Billy, straddling the Sphinx. "Off for

They whirred down the long slope with the westering sun broad on their right above the fir-trees. It was a roughish ride on the carrier. There was no pillion-seat; Billy was evidently not accustomed to carry pas-

"Say," said Billy, over his shoulder, "I didn't catch your name, did 1?"
"Almee—Snooks," replied the passenger on the spar of the moment, as well as she could for the wind whistling in her teeth, "Snooks!"

Aimee laughed. It was very like Scroope, and quiet as musical. "Near enough!" she gasped. "But 'old chap' will do. Is that American?" "American? Gee, no! It's the only English I know. Let it go at that-Amy is too feminine for a partnership, And now we'll let her out. This," said Billy joyously, as he opened the throttle wide, "is what the doctor ordered!"

The Flying Sphinx, freighted with he partners, roared down the hill and devoured the miles to Stanhoe.

(To be continued)

Even stands, less disease, fewer weeds, less dockage, better grades and bigger crops, and more, are some of the advantages of clean seed. One O. A. C. Experiment station field yielded 49.8 bushels from cleaned seed, and under like conditions otherinto a quarry pit an hour before and wise only 42.2 bushels from thresher run seed. The seed testing laboratory at Corvallis will test your seed

> Mangels and roots may be used to good advantage as green feed for the laying flock. It may be necessary to educate the birds into eating them It is important not to run short of green feed .- O. A. C. Experiment

> MEN'S MEETING Hear Men's Gospel Team, Sunday, 3 p. m., Federated church.

Chopped alfalfa or clover soaked in breeze, a noise that attuned likelf cu- warm water may be used as a sub riously to Aimce's thoughts. It was stillute for the more succulent green like the buzz of a homing bee. She feeds for poultry. Nothing else will looked up, and saw a motorcycle throw the pullets off production quite of following dust behind it like the feed. O. A. C. Experiment station. so quickly as the absence of green

GILLIAM & BISBEE'S

SUPPLIES JUST IN

Anything and everything for the chicken we have in stock

A flashlight on a dark night is a and styles.

"Say! Let me and you one! I've Who said the roesters were crowing and the hens cackling over the poultry supplies to be had at Gilliam &

Gilliam & Bisbee

True Tones!

suggestion This scientific tone chamber, light as a violin, as tensely resonant as a drum head, is largely responsible for Brunswick's Supreme Position in the musical world.

JACK MULLIGAN

at Harwood's Jewelry Store HEPPNER, OREGON

Phone Main 1062

January Records now on Sale

WE SELL HUNDREDS

of useful and attractive articles every day at prices surprisingly low. Come in and look our shelves and counters over

CASH VARIETY STORE

Big Values for Little Money

HARWOOD'S

DIAMONDS -:- WATCHES JEWELRY PIANOS -:- PHONOGRAPHS

HEPPNER

Phone 1062

OREGON

No Trouble-

It's no trouble for you to drop in our store and leave your grocery order, either as you go to or come from the postoffice-we're next door.

Or-

perhaps it might be less trouble for you to phone your order from your own home. In that case just ask central for Main 53; that's us

In any event—

it's no trouble for us to take your order and fill it with the same painstaking care that your druggist would employ in compounding a prescription. That's what we are here for-to fill your order with neatness, accuracy and dis-once in awhile when at work. Come in some day and give your order personally and let us prove this statement. Our prices, service and quality of goods will make you smile and the situation will be mutual.

We smile-

Phelps Grocery Company