THE GET-RICH-QUICK INVASION

The Russias communists told the workers to seize the factories and get rich. They took the factories, but they found that the darned things were not automatic—that just starting the machinery going would not produce gold. The French in the Ruhr are trying out the Russian experiment from another angle. The military mind forgets much and discovers nothing. The civilian mind long ago decided that while jailing a man for debt was satisfying, it did not pay the debt.

The Germans ruined industrial France. Eye for eye and tooth for tooth, France might well ruin industrial Germany. That was the old way of squaring accounts when nations were agricultural and only slightly independent. But today nations are independent. France destroying Germany is a second-floor lodger setting fire to the flat below because he does not like its tenant.

America learned a lot from the war. Europe learned nothing. European governments seem still to get their ideas of diplomacy and economics from the underworld. They might well set up statues to Cassie Chadwick in Wilhelmstrasse and on the Quai de'Orsay. With the impotency of military force demonstrated, Europe is certainly ready for an honest conference to settle a world economic problem on an economic basis. At such a conference the United States ought to be represented by the ablest body of citizens it can gather.—Colliers.
