BORAH GIVES ADVICE ON THIRD PARTY MOVEMENT

In a recent address in the east Senator Borah, of Idaho, gave the two old political parties some sound advice on how to avoid the entrance of a new party into national politics which he declared appears at the present time a not improbable outcome of present unsettled political conditions. The speaker said that the trouble with both old parties today is that they are "playing the game on too low a standard—far below the level of both the intelligence and patriotism of the voter." Continuing Mr. Borah said:

"In my opinion what we really lack is not capacity, not intellectual understanding of the task, but a want of faith apparently in the willingness of the electorate to follow a bold and determined programme. We are still trying to hold together and win battles through the power of patronage, the appeal to past party achievements, and denunciation of the opposition. It is a fearful mistake. It is bringing us to the brink of political disaster and ruin. The people are far ahead of their leaders, both in conception of duty and courage. If we can once understand this fact and believe it, we shall rescue the republican party from its present perilous situation and render incalculable service to the country.

"A democrat in the days of Jackson was a crusader. A republican in the days of Lincoln was an apostle. Give the people the issues and the programme and those heroic days in party politics will return. The men who have bravely put aside expediency and sought justice for justice's sake have had the greatest following politically, not only in their own day and generation, but in the hearts and minds of succeeding generations. We ought to think of that at the present time.

"I do not turn aside to discuss third-party movements. Such a movement is not impossible, not even improbable. But the old parties have it within their power to put an end to all such movements by courageously meeting and dealing with the problem at hand in thorough fashion. Let us make no mistake as republicans about the seriousness of the outlook. To misread the popular demand at this particular juncture means something more to the party than temporary defeat. The undercurrent is strong and somewhat unruly, but it belongs to any party which discovers it and harnesses it to the great tasks of the hour.

"If I am not greatly in error there is a demand in this country for a political party which will put behind us the vengeance, the passions and the intolerance of the great war and build for the future under the inspiring dawn of a new day, a party which believes in the constitution of the United States; a party which knows that it is safer to build up communities at home than bureaus at Washington; a party which believes that this great republic is wide enough in area and broad enough in principle to do justice and give protection to all tongues, all races, all religions found within its confines; and that all it demands in return is acknowledged allegiance to the government, loyalty to American institutions and obedience to law; a party brave enough to denounce and bold enough to disown as enemies of our common peace all who would kindle anew the baleful fires of racial and religious intolerance.

"Let us give to the country a thorough and fearless programme. If we do so and quit gumshoeing for bunches of votes here and there we will not only make our party invincible, but we will bring honor and strength to our country. We have found that it is easier to create a bureau and shunt responsibility than to devise a remedy and assume responsibility. If the government could be relieved of this shambling party expediency and the public service cleansed of political dread, many of the questions which seem complex would grow simple and more than half our troubles would disappear."
