The Federated church missionary society met with Mrs. W. P. Mahoney Wednesday afternoon and a most delightful afternoon is reported.

Mrs. Ed Reilman, nee Ruth Van Vactor, of near Iola, underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Heppner Surgical Hospital last Wednesday and is reported by Dr. McMurdo as recovering rapidly.

Joe Bakelson, who has been spending the winter at Salem where he and Mrs. Bakelson have established their permanent home, came up last week and will spend some time looking after his ranch and other interests.

Chas. T. Groom, forest ranger in charge of Parkers Mill forest district, who spent a portion of the winter in Pendleton, returned to Heppner Thursday to resume his duties with the forest service for the summer.

A pleasant select dancing party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Wightman last Thursday evening which was much enjoyed by a number of young people of Heppner and Lexington. The music, which was strictly home talent, is said to have been particularly good.

Federated church was filled to capacity Sunday morning by a congregation gathered to enjoy the Easter cantata rendered by members of the Sunday school. The entertainment, which was in keeping with the Easter idea, was well rendered and much enjoyed.

A shearing crew left here yesterday for Cecil where they expected to open the shearing season this morning at the Minor & Krebs ranch. John and Bernice Guant and Bub Clark are members of the crew.

A. W. Cobb and Claude White, of Boardman, were in Heppner on business for a couple of days during the week. Mr. Cobb says the price of hay this season has helped conditions on the project considerably and the people are feeling better and better.

C. C. Calkins and family left Saturday afternoon for Spokane where they expect to make their future home. They drove through in their car expecting to spend Saturday night at Pendleton. Mr. and Mrs. Calkins made many warm friends in Heppner during their residence here, whose best wishes will follow them to their new home.

Judge Campbell, S. E. Notson and C. E. Woodson took a trip through the Eightmile country Wednesday and report the wheat looking fine, some fields making a really wonderful showing for this season of the year. The fine growing weather of the past week is encouraging to the farmers who now have a bumper crop prospect.

E. A. Anderson, of Enterprise, a well known stockman of that section, came in Thursday to ship a car of jacks he recently purchased from Ben Swacart, to Wallawa county where he has placed them among the ranchmen of that county. Mr. Anderson is a brother of Ben Anderson, of Heppner, and Howard Anderson, of Eightmile, and formerly lived in this county.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Warden, of Redfield, South Dakota, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Mahoney for a few days while on their return from Long Beach, California, where they spent the winter. Mr. Warden formerly operated a big wheat farm near Redfield but retired a number of years ago and is now enjoying life. They expect to leave for their home tomorrow.

Ralph Finley was in town from his wheat ranch 20 miles north of Lexington Saturday attending a directors' meeting of the Morrow county Farm Bureau. Mr. Finley says the wheat is beginning to make progress since the advent of warmer weather and things look better. The heavy winds of the past three or four weeks were hard on the wheat, some fields being damaged to some extent by the soil blowing.

WILL TRAIN CITIZENS AT CAMP LEWIS IN JULY

The Citizens' Military Training Camp for Oregon and Washington, conducted by the war department under the national defense act, will be held again this year at Camp Lewis, Washington, and at Fort Worden, Washington, from July 26 to August 24. 800 young men will be received at Camp Lewis for instruction in infantry, field artillery, cavalry, engineers and signal corps branches; and 50 will be sent to Fort Worden for coast artillery instruction. There will be no course in aviation.

The objects of these camps, three being held yearly for each of the nine corps areas in the United States, are to bring together young Americans of high type from all sections of the country, thereby developing closer national and social unity; to teach the privileges, duties and responsibilities of American citizenship; to stimulate patriotism; to interest young men in the importance of military training; to teach self discipline; to learn the importance of proper physical and mental hygiene and to develop the physical standard of the American youth through participation in military exercises, athletic games and sports, conducted under expert direction.

The benefits derived by attending the camp are secured without expense to the students, as the war department provides transportation to camp and return, board, lodging and expert medical attention, uniforms, equipment, arms, laundry (for clothing issued at camp), and amusements in the form of athletics, musical entertainments and games.

Last year nearly six hundred enthusiastic young men "weighed in" at Camp Lewis for citizens' military training camp, and were found on "weighing out" to have made an average gain of 3.87 pounds per man, a fine general indication of the benefits of their training during a few weeks period.

Four courses of instruction will be given: a basic red course, 15 to 17 to 24 years; an advanced red course, 17 to 24 years; a white course, 18 to 24 years; and a blue course, 19 to 24 years. Applicants for the basic red course need have had no previous course at a citizens' military training camp and no previous military training of any kind. They must possess average general intelligence, be able to read and write English and be of good moral character. This course covers the simple fundamentals of military training and sanitation and hygiene and qualifies the student to take the next higher or advanced red course. The advanced red course qualifies the student for the white course and includes advanced instruction in subjects included in the basic red course. For the white course applicants must have a grammar school education or its equivalent.

Selected enlisted men of the regular army, national guard and organized reserves and selected citizens who have completed a red course in 1921 or 1922, and who were recommended for the next higher or red course are eligible for enrollment in this summer's white course.

Educational requirements for the blue course are those prescribed for appointment as second lieutenant in the officers' reserve corps, the minimum being a high school education or its equivalent. This course provides training with the object of qualifying selected warrant officers and enlisted men of the regular army, national guard and organized reserves, who have completed the white course or who have had military training recognized an equivalent thereto, for service as second lieutenants.

All applicants for detailed information concerning the camps, should be made at an early date to the Chief of Staff, 56th Division, 223 New Post Office Building, Portland, Oregon. Information pamphlets and application blanks will be forwarded promptly to those interested.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Wells, who recently moved to Portland where Mr. Wells and C. L. Keithley have bought out an established real estate and insurance business, came in Wednesday, called here by the illness of their little son, Woodrow, who remained here with J. J. Wells and family to finish the school term.

A little chap was offered a chance to spend a week in the country, but refused. Coaxing, pleading, arguing, promising of untold wonders, alike brought from him nothing but the stubborn ultimatum: "No country for me!"

"But why not?" some one asked finally.

"Because," he responded, "they have thrashin' machines down there, an' it's had enough here where it's done by hand."—Interior.

Johnny—"What makes that new baby at your home cry so much, Tommy?"

Tommy—"It don't cry so much anyway, if you had all your hair off and your teeth out and your legs were so weak you couldn't stand on them, I guess you'd feel like crying, too."—The Cornelian.

LEARN FACTS ABOUT STEEL

Interesting Discoveries Concerning Most Useful Metal, That Have Recently Been Made.

Very fascinating are the unsolved problems of metallurgy which were discussed at a recent meeting of an institution of civil engineers.

There is a common carbon steel which, when heated to 725 degrees centigrade and quenched in brine bends on becoming cold, 43 degrees, and possesses the hardness number 228 on the Brinell scale. If heated only ten degrees higher, to 735 degrees, and then quenched and cooled, it bends only 1½ degrees and its hardness becomes 512. Finally, when the heat is increased another 5 degrees, to 740 degrees, the effect is that the steel will not bend at all and its hardness number rises to 713.

All these results are produced by a range of temperature less than that experienced by the air on an ordinary spring day. There is a steel containing 20 per cent of nickel which is almost non-magnetic and has a tenacity of 40 tons per square inch. If immersed in liquid air it becomes strongly magnetic and its tenacity rises to 115 tons. Then, after returning to ordinary temperature, it retains a tenacity of 115 tons.

RELATIVES DIED WITH CUSTER

Many Members of the Famous Soldier's Family Lost Their Lives in the "Massacre."

In the battle of the Little Big Horn, popularly known as the "Custer Massacre," in the government's campaign against the Sioux Indians in the summer of 1876, and in which, besides Gen. George A. Custer, every man in his command lost his life, several near relatives of Custer were among the killed.

With Custer in that memorable fight was his brother, Capt. Tom Custer, the only man in the United States army who held two medals for capturing two flags with his own hands in the Civil war. After the battle the Sioux chief, Rain-in-the-Face, made good a previous threat, and accomplished a terrible revenge for an old grievance against Captain Custer by cutting open the breast of the brave young soldier and eating his heart. Calhoun, a brother-in-law of the general, was among the slain, as was Boston Custer, another brother of the general, who was civilian forage master of the Seventh cavalry, and Antie Reed, the general's nephew—a mere boy, who wanted to see something of life in the West, and who had welcomed with joy this opportunity to make the campaign.

Learned Barbarisms.

The use of Greek or Latin roots from which to form new words, required by the advance of scientific knowledge, is almost universal among learned men. On the whole the practice is useful, but it can be carried to absurdity. Dr. Brudenell Carter, the English oculist, in one of his books, protests against doctors who air their supposed acquirements by coining horrible verbal compounds that are usually intended to express very simple conditions.

I have, he writes, seen dacryocystostyringokatakuloids used to express obstruction of the tear duct, and amphioblediolitis to express inflammation of the retina of the eye. I once met a country cabinetmaker who built wooden frames, covered with needlework, to protect polished fenders against the feet. He sought a name for his contrivance from the local schoolmaster, who furnished him with antitribosiodocheidion and with a literal translation—an against-friction-of-the-shoes receptacle!—Youth's Companion.

Paradise of Departed Heroes.

The way in which the departed Scandinavian heroes passed their time in Valhalla, or in the palace of Odinn, is described in several places in the Edda.

They have every day the pleasure of arming themselves, marshalling themselves in military order, engaging in battle, and being all cut to pieces; but when the stated hour of repast arrives their bodies are reunited, and they return on horseback safe to the hall of banquet, where they feed heartily on the flesh of a boar and drink beer out of the skulls of their enemies, until they are in a state of intoxication. Odinn sits by himself at a particular table. The heroes are served by the beautiful virgins named Valkyrie, who officiate as their cup-bearers. But the pleasures of love do not enter at all into the joys of this extraordinary paradise.

Made No Hit That Night.

A certain actor, who walked across the stage in a street scene of a third-rate drama, was very fond of telling the friends what he would accomplish when he had a speaking part. No matter how small it was, he would show them what real acting meant.

Eventually his opportunity came. He was to appear in one of the scenes and say two words—"It is."

For three weeks, nightly, before his mirror he rehearsed; trying all sorts of gestures, expressions and tones, until he felt perfect.

The evening night arrived when the curtain was to rise on the new play for the first time, and the actor impatiently awaited his cue. It came, "and so this is the end?"

With his best tragic-toned air he stalked to the center of the stage and in a voice of thunder cried: "Is it?"
