Stout Women Like Long-Lined Gowns

Plaited Sections Have Tendency to Reduce Lady's Size.

For the woman of larger proportions the dress with plaited sections holds a strong appeal, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. Everything has been done with this design to give it long lines and a salutary effect upon the figure that is inclined to stoutness. There are the plaited sections interspersed with those that are plain and, since the material is all the same quality and coloring, it offers no distinct lines of divergence to work havoc with figure lines that in themselves are not entirely straight. The frock was made of a heavy weave of silk crepe in dark brown, or rather one of those shades of brown that lie between the dark and the light and are most expressive of the color tendencies of the present season.

The little cape is indicative of the present mode. Women are finding out how useful a garment of this sort can be. They are rejoicing in its possibilities of offering a slight covering for the frock along with its tendency to give to the costume a more formal sort of appearance. This little, short cape has plaited sections over the sides; and the back section, along with portions on either side of the front, is left plain. Then there is a collar made of printed silk showing tones of brown, green and yellow. It is attached in the most informal manner with tied ends on front that give it a becoming appearance and provide a finish that is consistent with the character of the frock. Then, to repeat the printed silk, cuffs have been added to the plaited frock, and they take on the same appearance as the collar by being provided with the ends that knot about the wrists and leave loose pleated ends flying. Then, around the wide crown on the little hat a scarf of the same silk is tied in an interesting way to solve the consistency of the entire costume.

The dress has been plaited in sections, the idea being that a whole plaited frock becomes too hard a thing to manage, but that when it is done in this manner it solves every practical difficulty and produces a frock of fashion just the same.

This sort of dress can be done in all colors of crepe from white, which is one of the enthusiasms of the season, to the duldest black, and in every case it can be so helped by the small application of brilliantly printed silk that it is at once lifted out of the somber and uninteresting class.

Trimmings of Posies for New White Hats

New white hats show trimmings of flowers. For the all-white hat that is meeting with such great favor, gardenias are much used.

One sees much of the violet shades among the new offerings in all departments of dress, especially in the millinery shops where even sport hats in the purple hues are prominent. It is a tone that harmonizes nicely with most of the other fashionable colors and its popularity is assured.

Cement Floors.

Cement floors are found much more frequently than formerly. These appear in different colors and tones, and are either plain and smooth or laid off in the effect. In kitchens the edges are usually curved up so as to abolish cracks and sharp angles in which dust and dirt may accumulate. They are also used in bathrooms, sun parlors, breakfast rooms and even, now and then, in quite formal rooms. They are sanitary, but cold to the

Motor Tourists Given Spice of Life

IF VARIETY is the spice of life, motor tourists get plenty of spice when they undertake to inform themselves concerning the vehicular and traffic laws of different states and municipalities and to conform thereto. And if they are not dabble witted and quick to learn, they may find themselves with ample time to pursue their studies during a few days in jail or hospital, or an indefinite sojourn in that bourne whence no traveler returns. For the law as applied to motors speaks a decidedly varied language.

Headlights that are approved in one state are taboo in another.

You pass around to the right of the traffic officer in making a left-hand turn in one city, and if you try to do another the next thing you know you hear yourself saying, "Good morning, Judge!"

In Pennsylvania you pass a trolley car, traveling in the same direction that you are going, on the left-hand side. Cross over into New Jersey and you must do exactly the opposite if you don't like trouble.

The vehicle approaching from the right has the right of way at street intersections in some places; in others, an effort to comply with that regulation may prove a short cut to the repair station and station house.

With due consideration for other traffic you may turn around any place in the streets of some cities; in others, you do your turning at corners only or you are out of luck. As to speed, in some states you can use your own judgment, provided it is good, while in others every little village has a limit all its own.

As standardization is the watchword of the hour in industry, so the same idea has been taken up with respect to traffic laws. Motor vehicle administrators from the states of Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine have formed a conference which is making a drive to secure uniformity in laws.

Strangely enough, one of the greatest obstacles in the way of this reform movement is to be found in the attitude taken by the motorists themselves in many instances. They do not seem to know what is good for them.

Margin

Leave an ample margin between your income and your expenses. What you lose in immediate pleasure will be amply repaid in the sense of assurance and self-respect which go hand in hand with a good-sized bank account.

Living on margin is diametrically opposed to the principle involved in buying on margin. The former is wise conservation, the latter is speculation.
