Glenn Boyer is in town for a few days from his Grant county ranch.

W. W. Smead returned from Portland Saturday noon where he helped greet President Harding and party and attended the convention of Postmasters.

R. W. Fleming, former Ione and Heppner resident, but now living in Portland where he is employed by the Richards Brush Company, came in Sunday evening and will spend his vacation hoping to harvest Morrow county's big wheat crop.

Edgar Northup, who has been working near Heppner for some time has gone to Ridgefield, Washington, where he will work in a logging camp the rest of the summer. Mr. Northup will get all the home news from the Herald which he ordered sent to his new address.

John Padberg and Mrs. Padberg were in town Saturday evening from their ranch on the flat. Mr. Padberg says the recent rains caused some of his wheat to lodge but he thinks a few days' sunshine will bring it up again. Indications now promise him more than double the yield per acre he had last year.

George Curran, former county commissioner of this county and one of our best known old time citizens, was here during the week visiting his daughter, Mrs. W. P. Cox, and circulating among his numerous Morrow county friends. Mr. Curran now resides near Gresham where he has a fine ranch and cherry orchard but he says cherries are not in good demand this year.

Dr. and Mrs. McMurdo returned Wednesday from San Francisco where they were a week earlier to attend a meeting of the American Medical Association. The convention was a wonderful gathering. Dr. McMurdo says, also the trip going and coming was delightful. Mrs. C. M. Sims and child, of Medford, came back with them for a visit with Heppner relatives and friends.

A party of Heppner ladies have left for an auto trip to Yellowstone National Park and will spend a couple of weeks in that natural wonderland. The party consists of Mrs. Julia Clark and the Misses Odette Gresham and Pauline Happold, of this city, and Cecelia Adams, of Portland. Passing through Montana they expect to pick up Mr. Clark who has been shearing sheep in that state before proceeding to the park.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Bayless went to Meacham last Monday to meet President and Mrs. Harding, returning Wednesday. They report having had a fine trip finding the Harding family and other notables in good health and spirits. Wilson called at the Herald office after he got home to tell the editor that the only fly in the President's ointment was that the Herald man wasn't there to shake hands with him. Wilson is some joshier.

A merry party of Heppner people droves to the opal mine in the mountains south of Parkers Mill on the Fourth and spent the day picnicing and picking up opals. The party left town at 6:00 A. M. and returned about 9:00 P. M., putting in a full day and overtime. Those making up the party were: Mr. and Mrs. Walter Moore, Mr. and Mrs. John Calmus, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Nys, Mr. and Mrs. Clint Gilliam and Mr. and Mrs. Lloya Hutchinson as well as all the kiddies belonging to the families mentioned. They say it is a delightful camping place and the trip was well worth while.

WELL BET HOOVER DIDN'T

Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce of the United States, arrived at the Multnomah hotel yesterday in advance of the Harding party, which he left at Spokane, relates the Oregonian hotel reporter. This is almost home country to Mr. Hoover, as he was educated and lived at Newberg when a boy. A number of veterans from Portland will recall a ride to England on the Olympic when Mr. Hoover was a passenger and at that time was in charge of food control. One morning he was called to the passenger deck to speak to the several thousand men gathered below him. He was talking on conservation of food. The men were discussing quietly what they thought of cooks who would feed them tripe for breakfast, for that had been their morning dish. They were in no mood for lectures on subjects such as food conservation. Mr. Hoover was speaking along and urging all to eat everything that was given them and waste nothing. Back in a crowd of doughboys was a long-legged lad from Montana. He was disgusted with the food he had been served. He arose and addressed Hoover. "I just want to ask one question," he said. "It's alright to talk about conservation and all that business and it's a fine thing, but I want to ask you, did you have tripe for breakfast?"

THE FARMER'S VIEW

See I to Farmer Brown: "The rain Will cause your corn to rot." Seize to me: "Why, yes, I guess It will as like as not." But at the price you town folks pay It ain't worth raisin', anyway." See I: "This chinch bug now has got All scattered through the wheat. And if you fail to sell your grain How do you plan to eat?" "There ain't no profit in it for me. With wheat down to a dollar-three. With bacon ninety cents a pound." See I and pork chops too. That eighty head of hogs of yours Are pleasant to the view." Seize in tones of mild reproof, "They bring me six cents on the hoof." See I: "It seems you farmers then, Are toiling night and day To help your fellow man and not To earn a little pay. How comforting the thought must be Of all your sacrifices, b'gee!" Seize: "My simple minded friends, On this you lay your bet: We horny handed sons of toil Will take all we can get; We farm (you have the right of it) Because we don't know how to quit."

G. W. Swaggart, proprietor of the Central Market, has put on a delivery truck equipped with a sanitary meat box from which he expects to supply the ranches in the Heppner territory during the harvest and threshing season. This will be a great convenience to the farmers as good fresh meats will be delivered right at the cook wagons whenever needed. Mr. Swaggart has been giving his customers good service in the past and this new branch of his service will no doubt be appreciated.

O S-A-Y, CAN YOU SEE-E-E— The President desires that every American be able to sing "The Star Spangled Banner." In order that the readers of this column may be up to date in this matter we give herewith the first verse as we remember it: Oh say can you seeeeseee By th' dawn's starry light What so prrooooooudly we hailed Te de dum dum to de dum. And to the rocket's red glaaaare Te do dum dum in aaaaaaaare, Proclaimed to de dum That the flag was still there! After you have had time to memorize this we will try the second verse.

HEPPNER LADY GETS INTO MOVIES When Postmaster Smead was in Portland last week he dropped into a moving picture show where a film of President Harding's reception at Meacham was being shown. Imagine Mr. Smead's surprise at seeing Mrs. W. O. Bayless, well known Heppner woman and his own step-daughter, shaking hands with the president. The camera clicked at just the right time to help keep Heppner on the map.

HARVEST WAGE SCALE The following wage scale for Morrow county has been fixed by the local Farm Bureau: Box drivers, straw and wheat haulers and header tenders, $3.50; sack sewers, combine drivers and header punchers, $4.50; loaders, $4.00; separator tenders (minimum), $3.00; cooks, $3.00 to $3.50.

LEXINGTON ITEMS Mr. and Mrs. Breshears attended the Postmasters' convention at Portland July 4. They made the trip in a new Ford, and report that the President and Mrs. Harding were very pleasant people and that they feel well repaid for their trip. They met the President at the Multnomah hotel and later at the City Auditorium, during the convention. Cliff Fridley is back in Lexington again. FOR SAE—New 60-cylinder Auto Knitter.
