JUSTICE.

More and more is the idea of Justice coming into the business relations of the country. Mer are beginning to learn that we are all members of one body and that one member cannot be injured without affecting the whole. That fact has been brought more forcibly to the public attention than ever before by the present deplorable condition of agriculture. One can scarcely pick up a newspaper or magazine without seeing the subject discussed and all agree that we can have no prosperity while our farmers are facing bankruptcy. To produce and sell below cost spells ruin. That is a business law that operates as certainly as the law of gravitation.

Governor Pinchot, who has been designated by the President to attempt a settlement of the coal strike is careful not to disregard this law. He takes into consideration all the parties concerned as shown by the following extract from his recommendations:

"I believe the proposed settlement to be fair to all three parties of this controversy," the governor said. "It is fair to the miners, for it will notably improve their condition as to wages, hours and recognition of the union. It is fair to operators, for it leaves them in position to continue running their mines, and to do so at a reasonable profit. It is fair to the public for the public can better afford to get anthracite at slight increase in price, if that can not be avoided, than not to get anthracite at all. In particular it leaves both miners and operators far better off than either would be if the contention of the other had been accepted."

The government has commissions to fix rates for our public utilities that guarantee a fair return on the investment and labor.

Heppner, in common with other towns, pledges a certain sum to the Chautauqua to insure them against loss, and so it goes.

The Herald would like some of that protection and while we dislike posing as a "calamity howler" we are bound to say in this connection that we also have been "selling below cost." All our business men have suffered from this depression and it is only right that the newspapers should take their share of the loss. But they have taken more than their share. Let us make that plain. Just now Heppner is preparing for the Rodeo. When the Rodeo was first talked of, and from that time on, the newspapers have given it their hearty support, as they always do to every project that contributes to the welfare of the town. While the main object of the Rodeo is sport it contributes not a little to business while it is here. The pastimes, barber shops, garages, hotels, restaurants, and other lines, will all do an unusual amount of business. No factor will have more to do with the success of the Rodeo than publicity, as it does with everything else that brings people to town. Now, publicity costs money and if a town has it somebody has to pay the printer. In this town about half the business men pay for the town's publicity while the other half help reap the benefits and pay nothing. Is that just and fair to business associates or to newspapers? Too many parasites kill a plant, a business, or a town every time.

Probably no man in his day used printer's ink more freely than P. T. Barnum and he has this to say:

"If I am ever profoundly thankful for any instrumentalities it is for the editor and his paper. They furnish wind for my sails."
