"Love Is An Awful Thing" A story of a lot of loves with their guns all trained on poor, weak man. There is often a lot of fire in the ashes of an old love affair, and Owen Moore proves the contention in "Love Is An Awful Thing." It's a perfect riot of merriment.

First Round of Second Series of "FIGHTING BLOOD" You will remember our hero lost his girl, his money and his championship and he and his backers were beating their way to Hollywood. This round deals with their trials and tribulations upon their arrival in the Movie City. These short photo-plays, each one complete in itself but comprising a series of twelve, are made from the stories by H. C. Witwer, which appeared in Collier's Weekly and other periodicals, and the film versions are quite as full of action, humor and romance as the stories themselves. "Fighting Blood" is a story of youth for all those who still have a spark of youth or a memory of youth.

AND PATHE NEWS WEEKLY

Saturday, March 1: A SPECIAL CAST in

"Down to the Sea in Ships"

Here is what REELAND REVIEWS (a reliable exhibitor's information bureau) says of this picture: "If there ever was a picture that is away from the ordinary run of 'movie stuff,' this is it. For itself, it will answer the far cry for the different and for the unusual. There is a simple tale of the Quaker folk of New England running through it, into which has been woven a sufficient share of melodrama and terrors. But it is not upon this the picture makes its bid for fame. It is the bigness that the director has been able to gather, as it were, through the lens of the camera, the unusual settings of reality, the atmosphere of the sea, and the tremendously interesting and at times marvelous scenes of whale fishing, taken at the whaling grounds, far out upon the ocean. At other times one sees man eating sharks darting through the waters and then dolphins and immense blackfish in whole schools rushing through the waves. Big, clean, wholesome entertainment that contains some of the most unusual scenes ever seen on the screen. The industry is helped every time a picture like this is offered." We could say no more if we could afford the space.
