MCNARY ON THE JOB

The announcement that Senator McNary will remain in Washington and attend to the duties to which the people of Oregon elected him is very much to his credit and should insure to him the vote of every Oregonian who believes that a public official should relegate his own personal interests to the public service by staying on the job and looking after the work entrusted to him by his constituents and for which he draws his salary.

Undoubtedly the senator could advance his personal interests in the primary campaign by coming to Oregon for a few weeks and personally put his case before the people but by so doing he would be neglecting his duties at Washington at a time when the affairs of government are in the greatest state of turmoil in the history of the country.

Just why any Republican, or for that matter any voter, should want to replace Mr. McNary with any untried man is not clear. His record in the senate is good. No breath of suspicion has attached to his name during his term of service. He has shown himself clean, courageous and efficient and has been a tireless worker for every measure that has been calculated to better the condition of Oregon and Oregon people. At the same time Mr. McNary has not been narrow in his work. His vision as a senator has not been confined to the boundaries of his own state but whatever promised better things for the entire country has had his support.

His bill for the relief of the farmer is the only one so far presented to congress that promises any immediate and actual relief and if it fails of passage it will be because of the adverse votes of members whose actions are governed by less lofty ideals than are those of the Oregon senior senator.

Senator McNary is content to remain in Washington and attend to his work there and allow the Republican voters of Oregon to vote for or against him as their idea of his past record would seem to justify. If the wheat farmers want to keep a man in the senate upon whom they can rely they will vote for McNary. If they want to send a man there who is reported to have said that if elected he "will call at the office of 'big business' every morning and leave his card until he gets an audience" they will vote for Mr. Baker, who is reputed to be the "big business candidate." If they want to send a man back there who has as the chief plank in his platform the enactment, in every state in the union of a compulsory school law such as was adopted in Oregon two years ago and recently declared unconstitutional by a federal court, they should vote for Mr. Kubli.

Which candidate should have the strongest appeal to the average Morrow county voter? Mr. Baker would look after the interests of big business, which during and since the war has seemed pretty capable of looking after itself, and would bring more people to Oregon to raise more wheat and cattle to sell at a loss. Mr. Kubli would do what he could to fan the flames of religious intolerance.

FOREST PROTECTION

WEEK DIFFERENT

"Forest Protection Week is different from all other 'weeks' in that it does not benefit any one class of people, but on the other hand benefits all of us here in the Northwest," said Major Jno. D. Guthrie, secretary of the Oregon State-wide Committee on Forest Protection Week.

"What would Oregon be without its forests? What would Washington look like robbed of its green mantle of trees? And yet fire, the outlaw, can turn its greenness into a dead black."

"Forest Protection Week has now been observed for five years and each year with greater success for all citizens of these two states, the woodlot of the nation, are gradually coming to know what their forests are worth. The forests are not only sources of lumber, afford recreation for millions, but furnish pure water and 'white coal,'" remarked Major Guthrie.

"The public generally is 'fed up' on special 'weeks' but editors, teachers and business men have told me that Forest Protection Week is one of the really worth while ones," said Mr. Guthrie.

The program for the week is being handled by special committees in Oregon and Washington. These committees are headed by state foresters in these states and have representatives of the lumber industry, forest schools, fire protection associations, Boy Scout executives, state game commission, superintendent of public instruction and federal foresters.

IDAHO LAMB PRICES GOOD

The prices paid for lambs in Idaho have gone higher during the past week or two, according to an item appearing in the weekly news letter of the Idaho Wool Growers' association, issued at Twin Falls, Idaho. The Union Sheep Co. of San Francisco, recently purchased 70,000 head of lambs from the Archibald and Smythe interests at 15 cents the pound for June delivery and 11½ cents the pound for July delivery.

Mrs.—"I must dress at once, dear. The Browns are coming this evening to make us a visit. Should I put on the percolator?"

Mr.—"Don't bother, you are dressed good enough the way you are."

Wife—Do you realize that you haven't kissed me for over a month?" Absent-minded Prof.—"Good Lord! where in the world have I been kissing?"

Senator McNary's record shows that he has done what he could, and will so continue, to improve the financial condition of the people—especially the farmers and stockmen.

The fulfillment of McNary's program for farm relief is practical. It will mean prices for farm products based on the prices of what the farmer has to buy. It will mean fewer mortgage foreclosures, fewer forsaken farms, more prosperity for the farmer and for everyone with whom he deals. It is a bread-and-butter proposition. Can that be said of the aims of the other Republican candidates?

Why Commercial Users Prefer the Ford

There is much significance in the fact that more than 75% of all commercial cars of one-ton capacity or less in the United States are Fords.

This overwhelming preference for Ford haulage units has its basis in the low cost of Ford transportation, the rugged construction of the truck itself, and its unusual adaptability to every line of industry.

Mechanical excellence, simplicity of design and ample power are further factors that have contributed to the popularity of the Ford One-Ton Worm Drive Truck.

The Ford One-Ton Truck equipped with an all-steel body and cab is now available as a complete unit, priced at $490 f.o.b. Detroit. Screen sides and canopy roof that may be easily fitted to this unit are supplied at small additional cost.
